Coal contract talks bogged down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attempts to win union approval of a proposed new coal contract appeared bogged down Friday, raising the threat of prolonging the nationwide coal strike.

"I think we're in for a three-week strike now," declared United Mine Workers' Vice President Mike Trbovich after the UMW's 38-member bargaining council adjourned for the second day without a decision on the contract.

The union postponed a planned Monday meeting in Pittsburgh of local union officials because of the new snag.

Meanwhile, a bargaining council member was fatally shot in the head outside his hotel room Friday during an apparent holdup attempt, authorities said.

Union officials said Sam Littlefield, 54, of Bessemer, Ala., was shot minutes after he returned to his hotel room from the bargaining session.

Littlefield was the UMW district president for Alabama.

Trbovich said he is still optimistic that the tentative agreement to end the coal walkout that began Tuesday could be approved.

But he acknowledged there was serious disagreement over a number of the 31 articles in the proposal, which would provide the union's 120,000 members with increases in wages and benefits totaling an estimated 40 to 50 per cent over three years.

Union sources said the bargaining council would probably recommend that the negotiating team go back to industry to reopen bargaining to handle what they called "house-cleaning chores."

An industry spokesman confirmed there had been speculation the union might seek a redistribution of some of the proposed benefits in the contract.

Such a proposal evidently would not increase the price tag of the contract, he said.

"As to whether we'd go back to the bargaining table, I just can't say. We'll just have to wait and see," the coal spokesman said.

The bargaining session recessed Friday evening after an eight-hour session. Another meeting was scheduled for Saturday.

If the delay in the union's lengthy ratification process pushes the strike into a third week, that could begin to cause serious disruptions in the nation's economy.

UMW President Arnold Miller had predicted Wednesday night, after reaching a tentative agreement with the coal operators, that he would have no trouble selling the pact to his rank-and-file and that the strike would be limited to two weeks.

A UMW spokesman said the bargaining council still had not completed examining the proposed contract after the second day and would meet again Saturday. "They're tired," he said.

The spokesman declined to predict the outcome nor state what went on in the meeting.

The council, drawn from members of the union's executive board and its district presidents, met for about 10 hours Thursday night and resumed deliberations Friday morning.

The bargaining council must approve the proposed contract before it is explained to a meeting of about 1,000 local union officials and then submitted to the 120,000 rank-and-file members for ratification.

The union spokesman said the Pittsburgh meeting would be delayed at least one day.

Kissinger confident Mideast won't erupt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger said Friday reports of military moves in the Middle East were being checked here "on an urgent basis" and that he and President Ford reviewed possible "contingencies" Friday morning with Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

While apparently taking the reports seriously, Kissinger told a news conference that "in our judgment we are not in a situation of imminent conflict."

He said he did not believe the Soviet Union would heighten tensions in the Middle East just before Ford is scheduled to meet with Leonid J. Brezhnev in Vladivostok.

"I cannot believe," he said, "that any of the parties in the Middle East would resort to war in these circumstances."

"There is a tendency to over-react . . . but in my judgment we are not in a situation of imminent conflict," he said.

The report was said to have centered on Soviet buildup in the Syria, moving of Syrian equipment near the Golan Heights as well as Israeli planning for a possible pre-emptive strike against the Arabs.

Kissinger appealed to Moscow and all other parties to exercise "a restraining influence."

Ford and Kissinger leave Sunday on a trip to Japan, South Korea and Vladivostok. Afterward, the secretary will continue on to mainland China, where he predicted an improvement of relations with Washington, but no dramatic announcements.

Kissinger brushed aside suggestions that Ford will be taking risks in facing demonstrations in Japan while Nelson A. Rockefeller has not yet been confirmed as vice president. The secretary said the President had committed himself to the trip and attaches great importance to it in strengthening relations with Tokyo.

He dismissed the trip to South Korea, meanwhile, as essential so long as Ford was in the area.

In the mini-summit with Brezhnev at Vladivostok, Kissinger said he hoped

American dependents flee from Angolan capital

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — More than 100 weary American women and children arrived in Johannesburg Friday on two evacuation flights from the racially tense Angolan capital of Luanda.

Most of the refugees fleeing the Portuguese colony, which appears on the verge of civil war, are wives and children of employes of Cabinda Gulf Oil Co.

The U.S. oil firm operates in the seaside enclave of Cabinda, sandwiched between Zaire and the Congo Republic just north of Angola.

In Luanda, a military spokesman said two companies of Angolan troops were sent into the city's predominantly black suburbs to ward off possible weekend violence.

In Rhodesia, another racially tense African country, the government said security forces killed seven black guerrillas on the fringe of white-owned farmlands about 120 miles north of Salisbury.

Joe Connor, a Cabinda Gulf executive who accompanied the Americans to Johannesburg, said, "Right now, things are pretty explosive in Angola and it was simply considered safer to get the women to South Africa before possible flare-ups this weekend, like what happened last weekend."

Connor was referring to rioting in the black suburbs of Luanda last weekend in which at least 50 persons were killed and over 100 injured.

Gulf chartered two special planes to bring in a total of 52 women and 52 children. They were put up at Johannesburg hotels.

Ford declares intention to be candidate in 1976

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford, getting a jump on other candidates for the job he has held three months, declared his firm intention Friday to run in 1976 for a full four year term in the White House.

Ford's decision to switch from a probable candidate to a definite candidate was disclosed through a spokesman almost casually at a routine White House news briefing.

A reporter who noted there was speculation Ford was ready to declare his candidacy asked if the rumors were correct.

"Yes," replied Press Secretary Ron Nessen. "He intends to run in 1976."

The reason, Nessen said, was simple: "He enjoys being President."

Ford's formal announcement comes about two years before the election itself — and well ahead of the anticipated announcements by such Democratic contenders as Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington and Sen. Walter Mondale of Minnesota.

Weeks ago, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., announced he would not run.

After last week's Republican setbacks at the polls, there were some rumblings within the Republican party about the possibility Ford would face a GOP challenge in 1976, perhaps from California Gov. Ronald Reagan. Nessen and other White House officials refused to say if this was a factor in Ford's early declaration of his candidacy.

A spokesman for Reagan said he doesn't see anything new in Ford's announcement. Clyde Walthall, Reagan's press secretary, said: "And the governor stands by his earlier statement that he hopes Ford will do so well that there will be no question what happens in 1976."

Before becoming vice president late last year Ford, who is 61, had promised his wife he would retire from public life. But he changed his mind after ascending to the nation's highest office on Aug. 9 when Richard M. Nixon resigned.

Nessen said in response to questions that he assumed the President had consulted with Mrs. Ford before making his decision to seek a full term and that "she must have gone along with him."

Asked whether Ford also had consulted with Republican party leaders, Nessen said, "I don't know who he conferred with ... if anybody."

Sources reported that Ford had told editors of U.S. News and World Report in an interview conducted last Monday for publication this weekend that he was ready to drop the "probably" from the description of his candidacy.

Legislature to debate prostitution

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — Leaders of the state Legislature who compose the joint Legislative Council debated angrily a proposal to reduce prostitution from the category of a felony in Wisconsin criminal law and to classify it as a misdemeanor.

The Democratic majority on the interim legislative planning agency easily turned back the protests of the Republican minority to send the proposal to the Legislature, which will begin a new biennial session in January.

The effect of the proposal, if enacted, would be to provide the same penalties for prostitution as are now provided for patronizing the prostitute. Both would be class A misdemeanors, subject to maximum fines of up to $10,000 or maximum imprisonment of nine months.

There was little discussion on the major content of a measure developed through an interim committee study. It would for the first time provide a classification in law for the seriousness and the penalties for various offenses listed in the state criminal code.

If approved, the measure would establish five degrees of felonious offenses, with a graduation of penalties from life imprisonment to two years, and with no fines to fines of up to $10,000.

There would also be three classes of misdemeanors, with graduated penalties, and four categories of civil forfeiture, involving only fines from a ceiling of $10,000 to $200.

In general, the authors explained, the bill is intended to classify crime according to the degree of actual harm involved in the commission.

The only dispute at the meeting of the council, which approved the bill for formal legislative introduction, was on the penalty for prostitution. Democrats who control the council generally backed the change, Republicans protested it.

Son held in slaying

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — The bearded eldest son of a well-to-do Long Island family was held without bail Friday, accused of methodically shooting to death his parents and his four brothers and sisters in their sleep.

Police sources were quoted as saying 23-year-old Ronald "Butch" DeFeo Jr. hoped to collect $200,000 insurance on the family. The massacre of early Wednesday morning was described as the worst in Long Island's history.

"There are some policies and we are checking on them," Suffolk County's chief of detectives, Patrick Mellon, told a newsman. "As you realize, it's a possible motive."

Mellon described as pure speculation a published report that DeFeo drugged the family's food Tuesday night so that in their ensuing deep sleep the victims would not awaken as he moved from bedroom to bedroom, executing them one by one with a rifle. Nor would the medical examiner's office confirm such a report.

Ronald Defeo Jr.

"I took the rifle and ammunition from my room, then I shot my brother Mark like this," DeFeo was quoted in a complaint introduced at his bail hearing. It covered only one of the six murders with which he is charged. Each carries a maximum penalty of 25 years to life.

Mellon said divers had recovered a rifle from a creek which runs behind "High Hopes"—the $75,000 Dutch colonial DeFeo home in a quiet section of Amityville, a village of 10,000 on the South Shore of Long Island, about 20 miles east of New York City.

The detective chief said the rifle was not recovered until Friday morning and that, pending ballistics checks, "we're not prepared to say it's the murder weapon."

The 5-feet-7, 155-pound DeFeo appeared calm at the hearing before Suffolk District Court Judge Donald Auperin.

After the shootings at 3:30 a.m. Wednesday, DeFeo reportedly met a girl friend with whom he shared a fix of heroin. Friends described him as a heroin user.

"I'm not telling you it's true or untrue," Mellen said of the report.

Young DeFeo's only police record concerned the theft of an outboard motor in 1973. He was sentenced to a year's probation in that case, and it expires this coming Dec. 17.

Avenue lighting, parade Nov. 26

Tie annual Santa parade and Christmas lighting ceremony will begin at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 26 with the lighting of Appleton's Avenue of Angels.

The announcement was made by Tom Van Wyk, chairman of the parade committee of the Downtown Retail Association.

The parade will last about 45 minutes and will include marching bands, floats and a variety of other features. It will run from the corner of State Street and College Avenue to the corner of Park Street and College.

Fond du Lac to be visited by cardinal

FOND DU LAC — Sergio Cardinal Pignedoli, frequently mentioned as a possible successor to Pope Paul VI, will be in Fond du Lac Nov. 30-Dec. 3 to dedicate the Marian College Consortium.

Pignedoli, who has had extensive experience as a Vatican diplomat and missioner, is currently president of the Vatican Secretariat for non-Christians.

Long considered one of the top contenders for the papacy, the prince of the church was called papal timbre once again in a Nov. 4 issue of "Newsweek," in a story about the Bishops' conference, in session that week in Rome.

Pignedoli, who is 65, was ordained in 1933 and was a chaplain in the Italian Navy in World War II.

He was made archbishop in 1951 and appointed papal nuncio to Bolivia in 1950. Four years later he went as a nuncio to Venezuela.

In 1955 Pignedoli was named an auxiliary to Giovanni Cardinal Montini, now Pope Paul VI.

In 1960 Pignedoli was made an apostolic delegate to Central West Africa and later held that position in Canada.

From 1967 to 1973 he served as secretar of congregations for evangelization of the people, the missionary arm of the church, and on March 5, 1973, he was made a cardinal and given his present position.

Little for consumers to cheer about

BY LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Food prices and problems captured the headlines again this week and no matter how you looked at the news, there wasn't much for consumers to cheer about.

Wholesale prices were up. So was the government market-basket measuring the retail price of food. The first of a series of hearings on industry profits opened in Washington, D.C., but everyone agreed the session was just a preliminary round.

In Rome, where delegates from some 120 nations have been trying to figure out how to avoid mass starvation, White House counselor Anne Armstrong said Friday that President Ford had turned down a request that the United States double its food aid to needy countries.

Mrs. Armstrong said the United States already gives more than any other country and said Ford's decision was based on concern over the effect such an increase in aid would have at home where the "American citizens are having a tough time feeding their own families."

Among the developments that affected consumers this week:

WHOLESALE PRICES — Higher costs for food and automobiles helped push up wholesale prices by 2.3 per cent in October, the Labor Department said. The wholesale price level was 22.6 per cent higher than it was a year earlier — the biggest 12-month boost since 1947. Prices for consumer foods increased 4 per cent in October, the government said.

MARKETBASKET — The Department of Agriculture reported that during the first nine months of 1974, the cost of a marketbasket of U.S. farm-produced food for a theoretical family of 3.2 persons went up $197, on an annual basis, over the 1973 figure. Middlemen took about 84 per cent of the increase.

HEARINGS — The Council on Wage and Price Stability opened hearings on the supermarket practice of remarking items already on the shelves. Everyone agreed it was only a minor part of the problem, although it irritates shoppers, and Consumers Union, refused to participate, accusing the council of failing to deal with serious issues. Government officials said Wednesday's hearing was just a first step. Other issues — including soaring sugar prices — will come later.

SPENDING — President Ford, on a speaking trip Thursday, altered the tone of his previous advice to consumers, saying that he wasn't advising people to curtail spending, but instead wanted them to "buy wisely, shop sharper." His statements came after the Commerce Department reported that retail sales declined in October for the second straight month.

PROFITS — Corporate profits were up during the three-month period that ended Sept. 30, rallying from an earlier decline. The Commerce Department said the nation's total output of goods and services also improved slightly during the third quarter. Total corporate profits for the three-month period stood at $158.4 billion, the Commerce Department said, a 12 per cent increase over the $139 billion in the previous quarter. On an after-tax basis, profits were $94.9 billion.

Bucks' downfall tops list of strange NBA developments

NEW YORK (AP) — Who would have believed that, after the first month of the National Basketball Association season, the Milwaukee Bucks and expansionist New Orleans Jazz would have the same record?

Who would have thought that such stars as Milwaukee's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Boston's Dave Cowens would not yet have played in a single game?

Who would have guessed that the divisional leaders would be Buffalo, Washington, Detroit and Golden State?

And who would have realized that Milwaukee would be the lowest scoring team in the league, and Portland, with the addition of highly touted rookie Bill Walton to plug the middle, would be the easiest team to score against?

Those are among the most unusual developments—not necessarily in that order—in the topsy-turvy, unpredictable world of the NBA so far this season.

Perhaps the most shocking of those has been the incredible downfall of the Bucks, the only NBA team to win 60 or more games in three consecutive seasons and who came within one victory of doing it again last season. Of course, their dismal 1-12 record and meager scoring average of barely over 90 points per game is due in large part to the absence of their towering center, Abdul-Jabbar, winner of the league's Most Valuable Player award in three of the last four seasons.

But even without Abdul-Jabbar, scheduled to be sidelined at least another week because of a severely lacerated left eye and a broken hand suffered during an exhibition game, it was not expected that the Bucks, the losing finalists in last season's championship playoff series against Boston, would fare so poorly.

Neither was New Orleans, also 1-12, expected to get off to such a horrible start. The Jazz, with several top-flight veterans, was considered the best expansion team in NBA history. But early injuries to four big men and the errant play of Pete Maravich, following the death of his mother by a selfinflicted gunshot wound, put the Jazz off-key.

Boston, the defending champion, also was playing sub-par basketball with an 8-6 record, a mark greatly attributable to the loss of Cowens with a broken bone in his right foot.

Other veteran standouts who have yet to play because of injuries or ailments include Los Angeles' Cazzie Russell, Golden State's Jeff Mullins and Atlanta's Herm Gilliam. Two first-round rookie draft choices—Phoenix' John Shumate and Chicago's Clifton Pondexter—also have not played. Buffalo's Ernie DiGregorio, last season's Rookie of the Year, is out for several weeks with a knee injury. And All-Star Bob Love of Chicago has been a holdout.

Probably the biggest surprise among the division leaders is Golden State in the Pacific. The Warriors didn't figure to be contenders because of the loss of Russell to Los Angeles after he played out his option last season, a ruling by the league that sent Clyde Lee to Atlanta as payment for a previous trade, the dealing of Nate Thurmond to Chicago and the injury to Mullins. But the Warriors were 10-3 going into Friday night's games.

On the other hand, Portland and Los Angeles, expected to battle for the Pacific title, occupied the last places in the division with 7-8 and 4-7 records, respectively.

Says college football of future will be low key

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Stephen Horn, president of Long Beach State, says he's only half-kidding when he predicts that "only four college football teams will be left by the 1980s."

The rest will have been driven out of the game because of increasing costs, he says, leaving super powers such as Texas and Ohio State playing each other twice a year to pad their schedules.

"I don't really believe that," Horn said Thursday, "but it's going to be very low key."

For example, Horn says football at Long Beach State raises only $15,000 a year and for the time being, donations are keeping the program alive.

Football is just part of the growing financial burden at colleges, added Horn, in Miami Beach to explore the need for athletic reforms as part of the meeting of the American Association of State Colleges.

Robert C. James, commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference and also a panel member, says colleges "have found it increasingly difficult to maintain a balance between athletic income and expenditures. It takes very little argumentation to demonstrate that this situation cannot long continue."

The third panelist, George H. Hanford, executive vice president of the College Entrance Examination Board, outlined a vicious circle encompassing professional sports, the media and women demanding equal treatment, "aggravating an already serious financial problem" and leading to "new pressures on athletic departments and on coaches to produce winning teams.

"Because winning depends so much on material, the unethical recruiting and subsidy of able young athletes continues to intensify."

He added that the pressure is prompting recruiters "to falsify transcripts, to cause coaches to get grades for their athletes in courses they never attended, to get alumni to give star quarterbacks automobiles, to prompt athletic departments to use work study funds to pay athletes for sham or nonexisting jobs—all, of course, in the name of what one observer has described as 'the drive to be No. 1'."

After a six-month study, Hanford has called for the formation of a Commission of Collegiate Sports to help solve deteriorating finances, growing commercialism, the conflicting roles of sports as education and as entertainment, unethical recruiting and exploitation of athletes.

"My own judgment . . . is that something needs to be done to break the cycle, to slow it down," Hanford says. "Hopefully, a Commission on Collegiate Sports could just do the trick."

James admitted that recruiting was a major problem. But he said "recruiting per se is our way of life" not only by sports but by churches, the military, industry and even by colleges for their academic staffs.

"It is only natural then, that our coaches seek to replace their graduates with the most talented athletes moving up from the high school ranks," said James.

Viking athletes get awards

Lawrence University athletes competing in fall sports were given awards at the Viking Bench and Elk's sponsored banquet this week.

Cross country awards from Coach Gene Davis were presented to Gary Kohls, most valuable, and Jay La Jone, honorary captain for a third straight year. Lettermen were John Chandler, Kohls, Jim Klick, LaJone, Gene Wright and Kevin Retelle.

Mary Heinecke presented the first varsity letters in Lawrence history to a woman's team. Special honors went to Ruth Schumacher, captain of the 1975 team and Ann Spaulding, captain of the 1974 team. Letter winners were Amy Bell, Sandra Martin, Cyd Einck, Nan Watanabe, Ruth Schumacher, Lynn La Jone, Kendy Sheldon, Beth Rogalsky and Ann Spaulding.

John McGee received the MVP award in soccer, Robbie Bearman won the Bruce Brown leadership award and John Imse and David Naunheim were named captains. Lettermen were Ken Kolodner, McGee, Jeff Meader, Bearman, Imse, David Wray, Jim Jacobs, Naunheim, Ken Shepard, Jeff Pretrenskik, Dave Page, Tom Meyers, Walter Deutsch, Herb Golterman and George Stibs.

Early skiing available in north

Enthusiastic skiers from the Fox Cities who are eager to get an early start on the season can travel north this weekend and find the slopes open.

Benefitting from heavy snowfall the past few days, Indianhead Mountain in Michigan's Upper Peninsula is scheduled to open Saturday. Located in Wakefield (a few miles north of Hurley), the hill will have five middle slopes open with "marginal" skiing. As of the latest report, Indianhead management says 16 inches of snow has fallen.

Also opening this weekend is Mt. Telemark near Cable. They will have about a 6-inch base on the Exhibition run in front of the chalet. Skiing will be limited to that slope. Artificial snow is being made daily and it is reported that this is the earliest date in history that they were able to start this process.

Valders edges Chilton

VALDERS — Don Willmas sank three free throws in the last 13 seconds and lifted Valders to a 62-60 victory in a non-conference basketball game here Friday night.

The Chilton Tigers led early in the second quarter 18-12, but then the Vikings scored 17 points to only one for the Tigers as they jumped to a 29-19 lead. At the half Valders held on to a 35-31 lead.

Chilton cut the Vikings lead to two points, 47-45, at the end of the third period. The Tigers grabbed a one point lead, 60-59, with 1:00 remaining to be played.

Willmas was fouled with 13 seconds left and calmly sank two free throws to pull Valders into the lead to stay. Chilton then threw the ball away and Willmas was sent to the line with two seconds remaining and made the final 62-60.

High scorer for the game was Chilton's Steve Mueller with 30 points for the night. Pete Reinertson was the leading scorer for Valders with 15 points, while Willmas finished with 11.

WFL's future uncertain

BY CRAIG AMMERMAN
AP Sports Writer

The World Football League, which opened in July amid great hopes and large crowds, has completed its 20-game regular season in considerable red ink and sinking support.

Five of the original 12 teams either have quit or moved, all are in debt, some are in trouble with authorities and the future is uncertain, at best.

"If we go through next year what we did this year, I don't want to be part of it," said Chris Hemmeter, president of the Hawaiians, a team which lost $3 million—or perhaps more—this season.

The league ended its final regular week with eight of the nine operating clubs qualifying for next week's first round of playoffs. Among the still active, only the Shreveport Steamer didn't make it.

A barometer of the depth of the league's troubles is that the Birmingham franchise, which only weeks ago was considered the league's strongest, has been thrown out of offices and had its assets attached in court this past week.

The Birmingham club owes $100,000 in back city, county and state taxes, was pitched out of two motel offices Thursday for failing to pay its bills and, according to a published report, has not paid its players in five weeks.

Not paying its players would make Birmingham the sixth active WFL team to suffer that problem in the past few weeks. Players on the Portland Storm haven't been paid for seven weeks, and team officials have asked local citizens to feed the players. The Florida Blazers haven't been paid since midseason.

Birmingham Mayor George Seibels pleaded for understanding. "If the Americans go down the drain, and I'm not saying they will, I think it will do irreparable damage to the possibility of Birmingham getting a professional hockey or basketball team," said Seibels.

The latest team to quit playing in the WFL was the Chicago Fire, whose owner called off the final game because he was losing money and said his team didn't deserve to be in the playoffs.

It is considered likely that the Chicago franchise will join New York (now Charlotte) and Houston (now Shreveport) in moving elsewhere.

Some WFL owners and players say the league has a good future, and that its biggest problem is the press, not money or lack of crowds.

"The only thing that is going to kill our league is the press, because it is making people panic," said wide receiver Dave Williams of the Southern California Sun. "The panicstricken attitude of the media has hurt us more than anything else."

Lions hire pro scout

DETROIT AP) — Tom Hudspeth, former head football coach at Brigham Young University and an assistant coach for the Chicago Fire of the World Football League, has been hired as a pro scout for the Detroit Lions.

McMillian sidelined 4-6 weeks

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Braves captain Jim McMillian underwent surgery for appendicitis Friday night and was expected to be sidelined from four to six weeks, a spokesman for the National Basketball Association team said.

The Braves' star forward was hospitalized after the team returned here from their Thursday night 112-100 NBA victory over Boston.

Braves Coach Jack Ramsay said veteran forward Jack Marin would fill McMillian's slot when the Braves chased went after their seventh straight victory in Kansas City on Saturday night.

McMillian was the second Braves starter to be sidelined in less than three weeks. Ernie DiGregorio, the team's floor leader, underwent knee surgery recently and isn't expected back until mid-January.

Pam Barnett, Astrologes share lead

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Veteran Pam Barnett and second-year pro Maria Astrologes shot four-under-par 68s Friday to take the first-round lead in a $40,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Miss Barnett, a nine-year pro from Boca Raton, Fla., had two bogeys on the back nine for a 37 after a blistering 31 on the front nine. She missed a three-foot birdie putt on the 18th to drop into a tie with Miss Astrologes.

Kathy Whitworth, Roberta Albert, and Hollis Stacey each had an openinground 69. Carol Mann and Sandra Spuzich were a stroke behind at 70.

The LPGA tour's leading money-winner, Jo Anne Carner, was one of eight players tied at 74, six strokes off the pace.

Miss Barnett was troubled for the last few holes by black clouds hanging over the par-72, 6,350-yard Lochmoor Country Club course.

"The clouds made it a little dark, and I completely misread the 18th green," Miss Barnett said.

Rockets to depend heavily on guards

NEENAH — Neenah's Rockets swing into the 1974-75 basketball campaign with only two returning lettermen but one of them, according to Coach Ron Einerson, is a "bonafide, legitimate all-state caliber" performer.

He refers to Wayne Kreklow, 6-foot-3 and ½ inch guard, who was a unanimous all-conference selection as a junior last season. He's looking even better this year, his coach reports. The other returnee is Paul Perry, 6-0 senior, who gained a starting role after injuries raised havoc with the guard corps in midseason. Kreklow was the Rockets' leading scorer with 360 points while Perry connected for 116. "Our guards are our strength, our experience and our leadership," Einerson, beginning his seventh term as Neenah strategist, declared. "A lot will depend on them. They both are excellent basketball players," he added.

The two account for much of the quickness, shooting power and ball handling on the starting unit.

Although the rest of the squad is short on varsity playing time experience, several of the candidates were on the state tournament roster and they performed with the successful junior varsity and junior reserve teams.

Dan Varberg, 6-4, 215 pound senior, will get the starting call at center. He sustained a knee injury on the second day of football practice. It required surgery and, although it has slowed him down some, Einerson said he is improving.

The Neenah coach will pick his starting forwards from among Rick Rank and Marty Suechting, both 6-3, 6-2 Jim Korth, all seniors, and junior Todd Herried, also 6-3. Herried is the only junior currently being carried on the 10-man roster.

John Wagner, 6-7, 220 pounder, is a backup center while other guards are Kurt Zimmerman, 5-11, and Tim Schaefer, 5-11½.

Thirteen juniors make up the reserve unit and Einerson usually suits up four or five for varsity games.

"Our depth should be okay," Einerson said. "Our quickness is in our guards. We don't have overall team quickness. We have good overall size but no one dominant sized player," the veteran coach added.

Einerson said the forwards and centers are average shooters but that he isn't worried about the shooting department.

"Because of the lack of front line quickness, we still have to see what we can do defensively," Neenah's coach explained.

He again plans to shuffle players into the game with regularity but emphasized "Kreklow and Perry certainly won't be running in and out."

The 1973-74 Rocket edition posted a 19-4 record, finished second in the FVA and made the state tournament field for the fifth time in six years. They lost a tough 61-59 first round decision to Green Bay Southwest.

Gone from that team are Tom Spice, Larry Madsen, Ken Zoromski, Kress Williamson, Alex Maslow, Ron Benson, Scott Blank and guards Bill Luebke and Tom Volkmann, who were hampered by injuries much of the way.

The '74-75 Rockets will open their schedule with a non-conference affair against Milwaukee Custer here Friday. They launch FVA activity Nov. 26 with Oshkosh North as the foe.

Einerson's first six Neenah teams compiled a glistening 126-21 record.

The schedule:

Nov. 22 — Milwaukee Custer; Nov. 26 — Oshkosh North; Nov. 30 — at Eau Claire Memorial; Dec. 6 — at Appleton East, Dec. 13 — Kaukauna; Dec. 20 — at Oshkosh West; Dec. 27 — Racine Case; Jan. 3 — Menasha, Jan. 10 — at Appleton West, Jan. 11 — Two Rivers; Jan. 17 — at Kimberly; Jan. 24 — at Oshkosh North; Jan. 31 — Appleton East, Feb. 7 — at Kaukauna; Feb. 14 — Oshkosh West; Feb. 21 — at Menasha; Feb. 22 — Appleton West; Feb. 28 — Kimberly.

Hilbert drops season opener

HILBERT — Hilbert jumped to a 12-1 lead but couldn't make it stand up as Waupun Christian rallied behind George Aalsma for a 63-52 non-conference win here Friday night.

The Wolves came away with a 12-9 advantage at the end of the opening quarter, but after that it was all downhill as Christian mounted a 25-22 halftime lead and added to it in the final two periods.

Aalsma got the hot hand in the second half, finishing the game with 29 points. Rick Thiel topped the Wolves with 20 points. Kirk Koeniger added 12 points and Steve Casper 11 for Hilbert.

FOND DU LAC — The Fond du Lac Cardinals blasted Oshkosh North High School, 83-43, Friday night in the non-conference basketball opener for both teams.

Fondy led, 21-15, after one quarter, then sprinted to a 43-24 halftime bulge. Tom Diener paced the victors' balanced scoring, with 16 points. Brian Bartelt added 15, while Bill Nehls and George Ries fired in 14 apiece. Nehls pulled [illegible] rebounds, as the Cards achieved a 40-32 overall advantage on the boards.

Badger '6' wins

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Wisconsin jumped to a 2-1 first-period lead Friday and coasted to a 4-2 hockey victory over Minnesota Duluth.

Goalie Ken Turko had 35 saves for the losers, and Mike Dibble had 25 for Wisconsin.

The Badgers led 3-1 after two periods, and Mark Capouch iced the decision with a goal at 14:35.

Wisconsin is 3-2 in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association and 5-2 overall. Duluth is 0-5 and 1-6.

Carlson back with Chiefs; Marcol, wife are sued

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Linebacker Ted Hendricks missed practice again Friday, while running back MacArthur Lane was merely an observer. Devine listed both of them as questionable, but added, "I wouldn't rule either of them out."

Hendricks is recovering from a groin pull, while Lane has a sprained ankle. If they are unable to start, their places will be taken by Ron Acks and Les Goodman, respectively.

Devine also said that Malcolm Snider will probably start at left guard in place of Bill Lueck.

A suit has been filed against kicker Chester Marcol and his wife, Barbara, seeking $20,542 for rent they allegedly failed to pay at their "Point After" restaurant in Milwaukee, which closed in September.

Just before the season started, the Packers acquired quarterback Dean Carlson from the Kansas City Chiefs for a third round draft pick — at least, it has been reliably reported that was the price they paid.

When John Hadl was acquired, Carlson was cut. And now he's back with Chiefs, who also apparently still have the draft pick coming.

FVA principals are opposed to Fondy's entry

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent staff writer

Fox Valley Association principals have taken a stand similar to that of athletic directors opposing addition of Fond du Lac to the league under a Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic Association conference alignment proposal.

Emmett Hoks, president of the FVA principals, said, Friday, "The principals have taken a stand similar to that of athletic directors in not favoring the admission of Fond du Lac to our conference.

"We have some reasons for preferring to remain status quo.

"We prefer not to have a nine-team conference because of problems with scheduling. We prefer not to be an odd number conference.

"Some schools think they are too small to take on a super power on a regular basis and as a conference member they would have to meet Fond du Lac regularly. Their point is well-taken when you look at enrollments.

"We like the idea of picking our own eighth game (football) and prefer to stay the way we are. If Fond du Lac is a member, there is no choice. (The FVA has no eight-game limit on football games, Hoks noted.)

"And, it should be stressed, the conference members are very happy with our current status. We feel we are a close-knit, ideal conference," Hoks said, summarizing the position of the conference principals on realignment.

Hoks stressed, "The WIAA plan is only a proposal. Something for conferences to kick around. We (the FVA) are only a small segment of the state.

"We are addressing a letter to the WIAA noting our preference to stay as we are.

"We have a pleasant relationship," Hoks said, "It's a super conference where everyone gets along.. . not that Fond du Lac wouldn't get along with the other schools. It's just that we have what might be described as an utopia."

Supt. H. James Ramsdell, in a personal phone conversation, saw some good points in the WIAA plan which has New London joining a larger school Bay Conference set up.

"I think maybe you play up to your competition," Ramsdell said. "The matter will be brought before our board. Of course, we're not happy with the travel concerning Marinette, but the other schools would be closer than our present set up."

Carl Bruggink, basketball coach and athletic director at Clintonville, expressed satisfaction with the present Bay Conference.

Bruggink added, "We welcome a chance to play New London and Shawano again. We've always had good relationships and competition with those schools. I imagine the 12-team proposal would be a round robin six-team schedule with the large and medium schools playing each other once during the year." (New London and Shawano would be in a large school bracket of the Bay, while Clintonville would be in the small.)

Iowa expects to face 'a very angry team'

By The Associated Press

"We will come back," says Ohio State's irrepressible Woody Hayes, "I know how our players feel."

Coach Hayes' erstwhile top ranked Buckeyes appear at Iowa in Saturday's semifinal Big Ten football round and Hawkeye Coach Bob Commings also knows how Ohio State feels after its tumultuous 16-13 upset by Michigan State last Saturday.

"We'll be playing a very disturbed and dangerous football team," said Commings, whose Hawkeyes' return to respectability this season includes an upset of sorts in a 21-10 victory over UCLA.

"Ohio State's great rivalry with Michigan is irrelevant at this time. The Buckeyes have to do a job on us this week for next Saturday's Michigan game to mean anything.

"We've got to be prepared to meet a very angry football team."

First-place Michigan, on the other hand, will be more cautious than complacent as it risks its perfect 6-0 Big Ten record and 9-0 overall mark against invading Purdue in a regionally televised game.

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler's been as quiet as Hayes was noisy over Ohio State's controversial ambush at Michigan State.

"What upset," seemed to sum up Schembechler's reaction as he worked hard to keep his Wolverines from looking past Purdue with a 2-4 league record to next week's big showdown at Ohio State with a clear-cut Michigan title riding on the outcome.

"Purdue is our big game," asserted Schembechler. "We can clinch a share of the title for a fourth straight year." Actually, Michigan has tied Ohio State for the championship the past two seasons and won it outright in 1971.

The oddsmakers see little chance for Michigan or Ohio State to stumble before their climactic windup. The Wolverines are picked by 21 points over Purdue and Ohio State gets a 31-point call over Iowa.

A third game of import Saturday is Michigan State's visit to Indiana with the third-place Spartans still nursing slim title hopes with their 4-1-1 league record.

The Spartans are favored by two touchdowns over last-place Indiana (1-5), but any letdown after the stunning upset of Ohio State could bring trouble since the Hoosiers have the Big Ten's top passer in Terry Jones and No. 2 rusher in Courtney Snyder.

In other Conference games, Wisconsin (3-3) visits revived Northwestern (2-4) and Illinois (2-3-1) invades Minnesota (2-4).

Wisconsin is an 11-point choice as the Badgers try to clinch their first overall winning season since 1963 at 6-4 against perking Northwestern seeking a third straight victory.

Illinois held Michigan to a 146 decision last Saturday a few hours after the fatal shooting of star Illini end Greg Williams in a fraternity house fracas. The Illini are a one-touchdown pick over Minnesota, although the Gophers last week shaded Purdue 24-20.

Phelan, ex-coach, dies at 81

HONOLULU (AP) — James D. Phelan, former college and professional football coach, is dead at the age of 81.

Phelan died at Queens's Medical Center in Honolulu Thursday. Cause of death has not been disclosed.

Phelan coached at the University of Washington, Purdue and St. Mary's College in Morage, Calif. He also was head coach of the Los Angeles Dons of the old All-America Football Conference, the New York Yanks of the National Football League and the Dallas Texans, a team that replaced the Yanks in the NFL in 1952.

Phelan's 1945-46 teams at St. Mary's played in the Sugar Bowl and Oil Bowl and produced an All-American, Herman Wedemeyer of Hawaii.

He coached at the University of Washington in the 1930s and early 1940s and at St. Mary's from 1944 through 1948.

Phelan was signed to a three-year contract as head coach of the Los Angeles Dons in March 1948. In August 1951 he was named head coach of the New York Yanks and then the Dallas Texans in February 1952.

Catfish Hunter to present case before arbitrator

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Catfish Hunter of Oakland, the American League's Cy Young Award winner this year, will go before an arbitrator Nov. 26 to present his contention his contract with the A's is void and he is free to negotiate with any baseball team.

The office of Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, said the case will be presented to arbitrator Peter Seitz in New York. The association will represent Hunter.

Hunter contends his contract with Oakland was broken when $50,000 of his $100,000 salary was not paid in the stipulated manner to a plan for deferred compensation.

Bottle cap nut cups are easy to make

BY CAPPY DICK

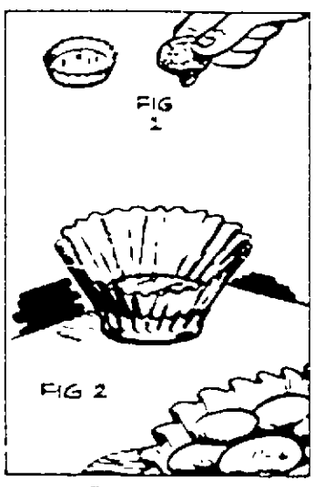

The boy or girl who wants to have a party for his or her friends can help with the preparations by making nut cups to be placed on the refreshment table. They can be made out of bottle caps and crepe paper.

After collecting enough bottle caps that have a cork lining in them, carefully remove the cork disks (Figure 1). To be sure the disks are clean, rinse them in clear water and dry them.

Cut circles of crepe paper three and a half inches in diameter. Lay a piece of the paper on top of a bottle cap and press the cork disk down into the cap until it is firmly in place. This will cause the crepe paper to flare upward as in Figure 2. You can adjust the flare with your fingers.

Fill the cup with nuts and put one of the containers at each guest's place at the table.

Because the color of the crepe paper will run if it becomes wet, avoid placing any damp or wet objects in the nut cups.

Weather forecast

Today's forecast calls for showers along the Gulf Coast, changing to rain in parts of Arkansas, Louisiana and Tennessee. Snow flurries are likely in Kentucky and southern portions of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, with snow in the southern Great Lakes area. Showers are expected in the Pacific northwest. (AP wirephoto map)

More snow flurries likely

Snow clouds will probably be seen hovering overhead most of today, according to U.S. Weather Service forecasters in Green Bay. The Fox Valley can expect light snow throughout the day today, with high temperatures in the mid-30s. Tonight will be partly cloudy, but the snow will diminish with the approach of warmer air and milder temperatures. Winds will be from the south at 8-15 miles per hour. A period of milder temperatures will begin Sunday, with a high expected in the mid-40s. The clouds will remain through the beginning of the week, but milder temperatures will probably eliminate any chance of snow in the Valley.

Sunset today at 4:26 p.m. Sunrise tomorrow at 6:51 a.m. Moonset tonight at 6:39 p.m.

Unemployment rate high in La Crosse County

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP)— Nestled among the picturesque bluffs where Wisconsin's rolling prairies and woodlands abruptly plunge into the Mississippi River, La Crosse has long been the "God's Country" of television beer commercials.

But for the area's thousands of jobless would-be workers, each a statistic in La Crosse's chronically high unemployment rate, God's Country is less than heaven on earth.

"I don't know how many times I was down at that unemployment office and I don't know how many times I tramped around this city. It was really bad," said Susan, a 20-year-old college dropout ecstatic over finally finding a job in a department store.

She was laid off seven days later.

Each of the unemployed among La Crosse County's work force of 50,000 has a unique story: too young, too old, under educated or overqualified.

The city still has several major industries, but an exhaustive series by the La Crosse Tribune pinpointed the problems of a community with not enough jobs for too many people.

Some are a part of the rollicking style and perverse brand of community pride and fierce individualism often peculiar to American river towns.

They can't bear to tear themselves away from the mystical magnetism of the land, the town and the mile-wide river.

But without jobs, they can't afford to stay, either.

La Crosse hasn't always had what manufacturers call "a poor labor climate" when they take their new factories elsewhere.

Twenty years ago, La Crosse was much like any other medium sized city reveling in a rich second childhood during the post World War II industrial boom.

Its unemployment rate was about 4 per cent, the same as the national average.

But a series of bitter strikes and economic reversals by several major industries sent established businesses packing and kept prospective developers away in droves.

Befuddled city officials and businessmen cannot understand the reluctance of new industry to relocate in La Crosse simply because the city has air, interstate highway and water transport routes and never experienced any energy shortages.

The county's unemployment peaked in the late 1950s at more than 10 per cent, and has often doubled the national average in the last 15 years.

Local Chamber of Commerce boosters claim the rate has dropped to about 5 per cent this fall, but state unemployment officials say it is still around 8 per cent and some local and state officials believe the jobless rate in the city itself is closer to 10 per cent.

"La Crosse's image as a poor labor town goes way back," said Quinn Johnson of the Chamber of Commerce, "but it's really not true."

The Electric Auto-Lite Co., one of the largest employers in the area, angrily cited "La Crosse's labor climate" when it closed its local plant in 1959 after an eight-week strike.

Another major employer, Northern Engraving and Manufacturing Co., had a bitter 17-day strike in 1958 and closed its local plant two years later.

A third industrial bulwark of the community, the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., suffered through seven crippling strikes—including one which lasted 167 days—before shutting down in 1969.

However, Michael Cordes, director of the latest in a succession of La Crosse industrial development drives, said militant workers can't be blamed.

"The people here are just like the people anywhere else," he said, noting that he was surprised to find no large slum areas when he moved to town two years ago. "Whenever you have industry you're going to have a strike now and then."

He said much of La Crosse's poor reputation among the movers and shakers of industry is unwarranted simply because many of the companies which folded their local operations were simply cutting back because of economic problems elsewhere.

"It has really been due to changes in policies of companies who decided it would be more favorable to furnish materials from another plant located elsewhere," agreed David Forer, head of the local AFL-CIO Council.

However, Cordes admitted that the high unemployment in itself is one of the area's major drawbacks as far as industrial developers are concerned.

"No new industry wants to come into an area counting on hiring unemployed people," he said. "It's just not good business."

Labor spokesmen also believe the workers are unfairly taking the blame for La Crosse's industrial stagnation in spite of an average weekly salary in La Crosse of $150 compared with about $200 for the rest of Wisconsin.

"The wage rate here shows labor has not been over-demanding," said Charles Buchall, business manager of Plumbers and Steamfitters Local 31.

Because of the lack of industrial expansion and development in recent years, La Crosse has become a retail trade center for extreme west central Wisconsin, where the work force is primarily service employes in retail outlets.

Consequently, the main drive of the Chamber of Commerce and city officials has been to lure more big industry to La Crosse.

They cite a University of Wisconsin-La Crosse report which estimates that 100 new manufacturing jobs would bring 351 more people, $1 million more in personal income, $565,000 more retail sales, $490,000 more in bank deposits and 68 nonrelated jobs to the city each year.

Cordes' grand scheme in luring more industry to La Crosse is to keep at least some of the young people who leave town every year (he puts the number at 1,000) working in the area.

Public school surveys show that 10 per cent of the recent graduates have stayed in town and joined the work force; about 17 per cent of them are unemployed.

While some local male chauvinists blame the continuing unemployment at least partially on women entering the job market, state officials say they probably help keep the jobless rate down.

Kenneth Kavanaugh, director of the area state employment office, said many more women could actually be counted among the unemployed if they weren't simply staying home as housewives because there are no jobs.

State statistics show that while women make up 40 per cent of La Crosse's labor force, two-thirds of those on the unemployment rolls are men.

Officials say that women are also holding down unemployment by taking low paying jobs the men won't even consider.

Another thing many men won't consider is leaving to take jobs in the auto plants in southern and southeastern Wisconsin.

Police & fire beat

Milen Brandt, 50, 218 E. Coolidge Ave., Appleton, was taken by fire department rescue squad to St. Elizabeth Hospital with unspecified injuries about 12:45 p.m. Friday after his van and a car driven by George C. Schuh, 56, 4511 N. Meade St., Appleton, were involved in an accident at Oneida Street and Wisconsin Avenue.

The Brandt vehicle, after being struck, left the intersection and struck two parked cars owned by Standard of Appleton, Inc., in the firm's lot. Appleton police are continuing investigation.

William J. Horn, 25, route 4, Kaukauna, forfeited $113 Friday to cover a pair of traffic violations, stemming from an arrest in the 700 block of W. Hawes Avenue, Appleton, late Nov. 1.

The charges were for improper use of license plates and use of expired registration. The forfeitures were approved by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

A charge of carrying a concealed weapon against an Appleton man was dismissed Friday by Judge Urban P. Van Susteren in Outagamie County Court Branch 1.

Matthew Johnston, 28, 914 W. Brewster St., was arrested last May 16 at Kay's Restaurant, 343 W. Wisconsin Ave., for pulling out a butcher knife and making threatening gestures at two waitresses. No one was injured in the incident.

Under the terms of a plea bargain, Johnston pleaded no contest but received no sentence after he completed a 30-day alcoholism treatment program at the Outagamie County Health Center.

Ina A. Purvins, 1019 E. North St., forfeited $56 for shoplifting a $39.52 dress from Gimbels Nov. 1.

The forfeiture was approved Friday by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Gerald M. Bauman, 28, route 5, Appleton, was fined $150 Friday for two traffic violations, relating to a late Aug. 7 arrest in the 800 block of W. College Avenue.

The fines were for reckless driving and failure to report an accident, which was amended from hit and run driving. Bauman pleaded no contest to both counts.

The fines were ordered by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Harold T. Machette, 42, Rowayton, Conn., was ordered to pay $183 to cover a fine and court costs for reckless driving, amended from driving while intoxicated. The defendant was arrested early Oct. 4 at Wisconsin Avenue and Division Street, Appleton, and the fine was ordered Friday by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Peter J. Schlise, 31, 1110 Oshkosh St., New London, arrested in Appleton for driving while intoxicated early Nov. 6, was fined $175 Friday and ordered to attend group dynamics traffic safety school by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

A second charge, for nonsupport of his wife and child between Oct. 1 and 31, 1972, was continued to Monday by Schaefer.

Gary J. Landers, 25, 1321 W. Prospect Ave., was sentenced Thursday to 90 days in jail and had his driver's license revoked for one year for driving after revocation. Landers was arrested the afternoon of Oct. 12 at College Avenue and Morrison Street.

He pleaded guilty before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Wayne L. Harold, 18, 1030 Timmers Lane, was fined $100 Thursday for disorderly conduct, stemming from an early Sept. 9 disturbance at Walnut Street and College Avenue, where he was being issued a traffic citation.

Harold failed to appear for his trial before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

David M. Ross, 26, Greenfield, was placed on probation this week for one year and ordered to spend the first 45 days in jail for cashing worthless checks and absconding from lodging bills.

Ross pleaded guilty to a consolidation of charges from Kenosha and Outagamie counties, with restitution of more than $440 ordered by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Most of the violations took place in Kenosha, while those in the Appleton area took place at Kohler's Motel, 3730 W. College Ave., and PJ's Place, 500 W. College Ave., Sept. 1 and 2. The check cashings in Kenosha spanned a one year period.

Schaefer gave Ross credit for time spent in jail awaiting disposition of the case.

Kent Volkman, 22, 2100 N. Harriman St., was placed on probation this week for one year for disorderly conduct, relating to a Sept. 28 incident at his home. The defendant was accused of indecently exposing himself in front of a window.

Volkman pleaded guilty before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

David Lenz, 23, 809 W. Brewster St., was ordered this week to abide by the terms of a nonsupport order or go to jail for 90 days for contempt of court.

The order, signed by Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane, provides that Lenz pay $35 per week until Feb. 11 and $45 per week after that for support of his 16-month-old son, who lives with the mother in Appleton. Of each payment, $10 is to be applied to the defendant's $800 arrearage.

The couple was divorced July 8.

Reynold Moore, 27, Green Bay, was ordered this week to resume $20 per week payments and clear a $755 arrearage by Dec. 13 or go to jail for 90 days for contempt of court.

Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane issued the order after a nonsupport hearing.

Moore's son, 4, resides with its mother in Appleton. The couple was divorced March 22.

Hilary Zander, 41, Marinette, was ordered this week to make $70 per week payments or face a 90-day jail term for contempt of court.

The order came after a non-support hearing before Outagamie County Judge R. Thomas Cane. Cane directed that $10 from each payment go toward defraying a $1,000 arrearage.

Of the couple's five children, three, ages 9 to 18, reside with the mother in Appleton. A divorce action is pending.

Lester Snell, 115 Gardners Row, Appleton, was ordered this week to make $100 biweekly support payments or go to jail for 90 days for contempt of court. The order came after a nonsupport hearing before Judge R. Thomas Cane in Outagamie County Court Branch 3.

Snell's arrearage, in payments for his two children, ages 13 and 14, is to be determined at a subsequent divorce action hearing before Cane.

The children reside with their mother in Appleton.

Jury trials were scheduled Friday for March 6 and 20 for Carl D. Doll, 29, 115 Oak St., Brillion. The trials are for theft and marijuana possession, respectively.

Doll is accused of walking out of the Peasant Shop, 109 N. Durkee St., Appleton, without paying for a $140 leather coat on Oct. 2, and with marijuana possession Nov. 8 at a Lawrence University fraternity house, where police went to serve him with a warrant on the other charge.

Doll did not appear in court Friday, but his attorney entered the respective not guilty pleas before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Gordon F. Baumgart, 31, route 4, Appleton, was fined $250, sentenced to 90 days in jail with Huber Law privileges and had his driver's license suspended Friday for six months for traffic violations. The sentence was ordered by Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Baumgart was involved in a high-speed chase with police as he drove his motorcycle in and around downtown Appleton early Aug. 7. The chase proceeded out College Avenue toward Marcella Street, at the south edge of Kimberly, where a collision took place between the cycle and a squad car. Baumgart pleaded guilty to attempting to elude and driving at an imprudent speed, which was amended from reckless driving.

Milwaukee teachers to join urban coalition

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Teachers Education Association voted Wednesday to join the Wisconsin Coalition of City Education Associations.

The Green Bay and Racine associations voted earlier in favor of forming the group for urban teacher groups to work together in areas of mutual interest. Madison teachers are expected to decide at a meeting Tuesday on whether to become part of the coalition.

The Milwaukee teachers split from the Wisconsin Education Association Council earlier this year on the issue of local autonomy, and became an independent group. Teachers from the other three state urban centers still are part of the WEAC, although they also have been engaged in a dispute with that organization on the same issue.

David L. Friebel, 35, route 3, Seymour, was listed in fair condition at St. Elizabeth Hospital after he sustained a fractured collar bone in a single-car crash near county trunks CC and JJ, Town of VandenBroek, about 1 a.m. today.

Police said Friebel was northbound on CC when he lost control, struck a guard rail and went into a nearby creek.

Douglas Glocke, 29, route 5, Appleton, was treated for eye injuries and released from St. Elizabeth Hospital after an accident at Valley Cast Wire Co., 908 N. Lowe St., about 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Firemen said Glocke was working with some wire when it snapped and struck him in the left eye.

Margaret Mead doesn't mince her words

BY MAIJA PENIKIS
Post-Crescent staff writer

FOND DU LAC — A small woman with a big reputation as historian, prophet and social critic kept that reputation intact Thursday after a biting lecture on society, receiving a standing ovation from a capacity audience at the University of Wisconsin Center-Fond du Lac.

Margaret Mead, one of the most renowned anthropologists, minced no words as she discussed world hunger, political intervention in the private domain and the changing roles of women.

Probably one of the most quotable people around, she threw out kernels of wisdom by the handsful, gleaned from more than seven decades of life, five of them as an anthropologist.

"On the whole, I think the central push in the women's movement is for things that should have been done 50 years ago and are 50 years too late," she said, beginning her lecture.

"Those are the things like equal opportunities, equal pay and provisions for somebody to take care of their children if you don't have a wife. Wives, you know, are the cheapest form of labor around," Mead commented.

She later privately confided that she had not run into too much professional discrimination in her life, having learned to cope with it early for she comes from three generations of professional women in her family.

There are two edges to the women's movement, Mead felt: "The women who want to be as much like men as possible and want to do what men do, no matter how badly the men do it."

At the other end, she said, is a group who wish to goodness the men would leave them alone, professionaly speaking, she said.

The bulk is in the middle. "They aren't interested in the women's movement but would simply like to have a situation where a woman is free to choose whether she will work or not and at what, and will have some backing up in case she is deserted.

"In this country," Mead said, "men are responsible only for their current wives. Current. And not very responsible for them, often. Fathers, brothers, sons and ex-husbands have no responsibility at all, so we have something like nine million households headed by women."

On a surprising note, Mead told the audience she had been against the Equal Rights Amendment, "because it wanted to make women exactly like men, and they aren't. I think also men would have taken away the jobs from women the minute these jobs would pay more. They always have, historically," she said.

In the Depression the Schoolmaster's Association decided that women were incapable of teaching second year history. "Jobs were scarce, you see," Mead said.

However, she did add, "Now that I see who I was siding with in voting against ERA, I am for it."

She felt that there was no such thing as a homogeneous women's movement in this coutry, ather that a changing world with changing needs is making most women look at new roles in life. "They are trying to redefins their position and roles in the world and are doing it in different ways, is all," the speaker commented.

"This is the first time in history that the wife has stayed at home and produced nothing. She keeps the house going and she travels 15 miles to take back a piece of defective apparatus. Not very constructive. At the end of the week the woman who lives in a suburban home can say, 'Well, we got through it. Nothing happened. The house didn't burn down and the children are doing fine.' Not very constructive, especially compared to their mothers and grandmothers who worked long hours on the farm," the anthropologist pointed out.

One of the reasons this society has evolved into a non-constructive society, she claimed, is that in the 1950s, the whole societal philosophy was that every single person was a member of a couple from age 16-90, "which threw the whole country into a Noah's Ark.

"We tried to get everyone married. Of course, they didn't stay married, at least not to the same person, because you don't when you don't care for the one you're married to."

That caused the high divorce rate, she said, and many of the problems society has with the children and youth today. "So many came from broken homes. What a terrible thing we did to our children in that era."

Mead said a great many people see the women's movement as producing divorce. "That's just rationalization by people who want to get a divorce anyway," she said. "As I said, the bulk of women simply want to choose a more productive lifestyle, not take over the households completely."

Asked later about the more noted women's liberationists, Mead answered, "Those are the extremists, who have been accused of burning bras, which they never did besides that one time for publicity. But the fact that they have been accused of this has helped draw attention to the movement. In this country we don't pay any attention to anything until someone does something extreme."

Turning to humanity and civilization, Mead told the audience that she is always very touched when anthropologists unearth something that shows the primative man cared for others.

"This is the beginning of humanity, which civiliation abandons periodically, and our civilization has abandoned it almost totally," Mead said.

"We are perfectly capable of caring for everyone within our civilization, but we don't even care for people in our own country.

"We have five million people starving. India has 30 million in need of food, and we kill calves and bury them. Farmers get paid for not producing food. It is a crime of such proportions that it is almost unbelievable a society could have done it. Even in the Depression, we killed little pigs to keep the prices up," Mead stated.

All of these, she added, are political moves. "Political exploitation is everywhere. We see it best in the the home. The government has even invaded the home.

"It is the one telling women when to have children and when not to. Because of overpopulation, they are now allowing abortions and birth control. If a war came along and people were needed, they would rescind that fast," Mead felt.

"Don't let anyone tell you this is a religious problem. It is a political one, determined by the demagogues of the world."

Organized labor and management joined toward common goals Thursday for the fourth annual youth opportunity day at 49 Fox Valley bussinesses. Cherly Roberts, from left,, and Nancy Johann, both of Armstrong High School; Mrs. Sharon Salm, a Kimberly High School counselor; and Dan Brown of Neenah, watched Tony Dairo weld at Miller Electric. County personnel director?

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

James Dickson, head of Dickson and Associates, Neenah consulting firm hired to do an Outagamie County job study, said Thursday he will recommend that the county hire a personnel director "if the position has responsibility for all jobs in the county."

Dickson told the county board he was only 40 per cent completed with his overall study, but on several specific requests he basically supported department requests for additional personnel for next year.

Action on those requests had been held up by the board until Thursday's report, much to the disgruntlement of some supervisors.

As a result of the report, the board:

— Approved hiring three additional social workers in the juvenile services unit, but not in the form originally requested by the department;

— Approved hiring an additional public health nurse and part-time clerical help for the county nurse's office, but rejected putting money in the budget to buy desks and chairs for them;

— Approved hiring five additional personnel for the guidance center, also on a somewhat modified basis from the original request.

A fourth personnel request, for park personnel, was to be acted on today.

Dickson told the board it is possible to determine the ideal number of people required to do a job, but that the level of service to be provided was their own political decision. The personnel director, he said, "should more than earn his salary" if properly used.

His primary purpose, Dickson said, should be to help department heads utilize their help more effectively.

The social services department had requested social workers in classifications II, III and IV because the juvenile caseload has nearly doubled in the last 10 months. Dickson concurred on the need, noting the number of juvenile cases in court has increased 170 per cent in two years.

"The present caseload exceeds the point where personnel can effectively function," he said. However, he questioned the need for social workers with advanced degrees and suggested that three social workers in classification II be hired, two of them now and one July 1, if the juvenile caseload continues to grow. This was agreed to by the Board of Social Services.

At the same time, Dickson suggested that a study be made to determine if the youth services unit is producing results; whether the personnel can be used more effectively; whether other agencies can be involved; and what can be done to reduce juvenile deliquency.

Dickson said there was a great need for additional nursing service in the county and that hiring an additional public health nurse would only improve the situation slightly.

Of 10 comparable counties, he said, Outagamie ranks 10th in number of nurses and the county nurse's department also ranks 10th. Hiring one nurse would bring the county department up to fifth, but would still leave the county 10th overall.

For the guidance center, Dickson suggested phasing the new personnel in gradually, rather than hiring all five at one time. The requests, he said, are in line with state guidelines for guidance centers. But, he added, the key is when to add the personnel. "If you grow too fast it is hard to add effectively."

While he suggested adding the people over a two-year period, the board approved hiring three immediately and two in July.

The only position Dickson did not fully support was a park director. He said the proposed table of organization was top-heavy with supervisory personnel. He said he could support combining the park director with one of the other supervisory positions.

The arguments over how to handle the requests for new personnel also brought an admission that there is no formal county policy.

All of the new personnel requests had been kicked out of the budget on the grounds that there is a county policy that personnel requests must be approved by the county board before they can be requested in the budget.

"If we do have a policy, where is it?" Supv. Daniel Verstegen asked. County Executive Alvin Woehler said it was something "that has come up over the last 10 years." Verstegen said this was not policy, but only precedent. "I would like a policy to include personnel requests in the budget," he said. No action was taken.

Dickson said there was a great need for additional nursing service in the county and that hiring an additional public health nurse would only improve the situation slightly.

Of 10 comparable counties, he said, Outagamie ranks 10th in number of nurses and the county nurse's department also ranks 10th. Hiring one nurse would bring the county department up to fifth, but would still leave the county 10th overall.

For the guidance center, Dickson suggested phasing the new personnel in gradually, rather than hiring all five at one time. The requests, he said, are in line with state guidelines for guidance centers. But, he added, the key is when to add the personnel. "If you grow too fast it is hard to add effectively."

While he suggested adding the people over a two-year period, the board approved hiring three immediately and two in July.

The only position Dickson did not fully support was a park director. He said the proposed table of organization was top-heavy with supervisory personnel. He said he could support combining the park director with one of the other supervisory positions.

The arguments over how to handle the requests for new personnel also brought an admission that there is no formal county policy.

All of the new personnel requests had been kicked out of the budget on the grounds that there is a county policy that personnel requests must be approved by the county board before they can be requested in the budget.

"If we do have a policy, where is it?" Supv. Daniel Verstegen asked. County Executive Alvin Woehler said it was something "that has come up over the last 10 years." Verstegen said this was not policy, but only precedent. "I would like a policy to include personnel requests in the budget," he said. No action was taken.

Exploring religion

The Most Rev. Mark Schmitt, auxiliary bishop of Green Bay, this week discussed how he lives his faith in the ministry with senior students from Kimberly High School . Approximately 500 sophomores, juniors and seniors from the school took part in a religion congress, sponsored by St. Paul Catechetical Center, Combined Locks; Holy Name School, Kimberly; Holy Angels School, Darboy; and the United Church of Christ, Kimberly. The three separate class sections explored conviction, revelation and celebration themes in the Christian religion with people from many walks of life. (Post-Crescent photo)

Priest-doctor-missionary to discuss work in Brazil

A unique missionary who is a priest and a physician, the Rev. Dr. Luke Tupper, a Franciscan, is visiting the Fox Cities to talk of his work with the people of the Amazon.

His visit is sponsored by the St. Bernard Social Concerns Committee.

The missionary will speak at the 5 p.m. mass today at St. Margaret Mary Church in Neenah and at the 6:30 p.m. mass at St. Bernard.

On Sunday he will speak at ths 7, 8:30, 10 and 11:30 a.m. masses and present a slide show of his work at 4 p.m., all at St. Bernard, and speak at the 7:15 p.m. mass at Sacred Heart. .

The priest is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Amil Hofmann of Appleton. Mrs. Hofmann is the mother of Dr. Richard Binsfeld, a former member of St. Bernard, who left his dentistry practice in Appleton to join Tupper in his work aboard the ship, "Esparanca," which means "hope" in Portnguese. . .

The project is ecumenical in nature, . with support coming from many Protestant church leaders and organizations. His staff cares for the needs of the Indians living in the upper reaches of the Amazon River in Brazil.

Tupper's program was divided into three phases. He began his work in the Amazon Valley in 1969, working with 250,000 people on preventive health programs. To date, he has immunized 125,000 people against eight diseases.

The second part of the program involved dental care, and Binsfeld is in charge of that portion.

The third phase was to get the hospital ship, which could sail into the interior of the jungle with adequate space and equipment for surgery and other types of medical care. It is this program for which Tupper is appealing for assistance.

Ohio diocese certifies woman for ordination

CLEVELAND — Joan P. Grimm, 27, a chaplain at Kenyon College here, has been certified for ordination to the Episcopal priesthood by the standing committee of the Diocese of Ohio.

She may be the first woman in the Episcopal Church to have obtained such approval. In this respect, Grimm's situation is notably different from the 11 others who participated in an ordination ceremony in Philadelphia, which later was declared invalid by the church's House of Bishops.

One of the reasons the bishops cited in invalidating those ordinations was that none of the women had been approved by her diocesan standing committee.

Grimm has achieved that goal, and said she believes her ordination is now up to her bishop, the Rt. Rev. John H. Burt.

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Accumulation of fluid can cut life expectancy

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a married woman, 62. I have noticed that if I press my fingers in my legs it leaves an indentation which leads me to believe that I retain liquid.

Will this shorten my life? Is there anything that will cure this? If so, what? — Mrs. J.S.

You are quite right — this is an indication of fluid accumulation, and a person is wise to heed the warning. (More than likely you have some swelling of legs or ankles to go along with it.)

The human body, of course, contains a great deal of fluid, and the body must not "dry out" too much. Too much loss of fluid (dehydration) can be disastrous, as is the case of people lost at sea or on a desert without water. They don't survive long.

Fluids (blood, naturally, but other moistures, too) move constantly through the body, carrying nutrients to the tissues, picking up waste matter to be carried to the kidneys or other organs to be discarded.

But when the body's tissues accumulate too much fluid, it doesn't flow as efficiently. Like a slow-running river, it forms stagnant backwaters. Flotsam gathers. A fast-running river cleans itself, stays clear. It's the slow-moving one that turns brackish.

So when you press your fingers into your leg, you squeeze out fluid from a spot, and the indentation remains until the fluids slowly seep back in.

The dents are not a disease; they are a sign of trouble, not trouble in itself.

What causes the slow flow, the fluid accumulation? It can be because the bloodstream can't be carried back to the heart and lungs as promptly as it used to be. Tight garters and girdles can be the prime cause. Or so can varicose veins in the legs. But there are more central possibilities: Heart or kidneys not operating at normal efficiency.

So yes, those dents indicate fluid. But what causes the fluid accumulation is something that you should determine — or rather have your doctor determine.

Until the cause is pinpointed, you have no way of knowing what the proper treatment is, but it is essential that you find out, because when excess fluid accumulates it can affect your life expectancy.

It most certainly can affect the way you feel, have its effect on your briskness, endurance, zest for life.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can an adult male, 26, increase his height with HGH, the human growth hormone? — E.S.S.

No, because by that age the bone structure has become fixed and cannot grow any more.

———

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My boyfriend and I had intercourse and since then I have had a rash and sperm drain from me like a faucet. Could it be from being his first time and that he did something wrong? Or is it a sign of venereal disease? I want to have a Pap test to see for sure but don't have any money. In school I learned there was a place that will do it for free if one doesn't have any money, but I forget where it is. How can I find out? — Miss X.

The easiest way in most cases and probably yours) is to phone the city health department and ask. But ask about venereal disease testing —not about Pap tests, because the Pap test is not designed to detect venereal disease. Your symptoms are highly suspicious, so see about a test at once.

Russians finally permit Jewish activist to leave

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Jewish activist Viktor Polsky has been given an exit visa after a four-year wait—providing he can get out of the country in six days.

Polsky, a physicist, is the first of the leading dissidents to get an emigration visa. He would not say whether Thursday's action by the Soviet government was a result of a recent U.S.-Soviet agreement under which the Soviets reportedly promised to liberalize emigration in return for better trade terms.

Polsky, 44, said he planned to take his family with him.

Question of PLO strains American Christian-Jewish relationships

BY GEORGE CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some Christian leaders, like most Jews, object strongly to inclusion of the Liberation Organization in United Nations consideration of the Middle East. But some other churchmen say it could be useful.

The differences about it have strained feelings between American Christians and Jews.

"Another stumbling block has arisen in the already boulder-strewn road of Jewish-Christian relations," says Rabbi Balfour Brickner, head of the interreligious affairs department of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

"Many Jews have the feeling that Christians are deserting them on the Israel issue. It has now become the most divisive subject separating Jews from Christians in this country."

To try to reconcile attitudes, a series of public discussions of the problem, involving Jewish and Christian representatives, have been held lately in various places, with more of them in the offing.

But even this effort at times has hit snags. When the United Methodist women's division planned a recent forum on the matter here, Jewish spokesmen declined to take part, charging the scheduled panel was stacked against them with pro-Arab representatives.

On the other hand, sharp Christian opposition to the United Nation's dealing with Yasir Arafat's guerrilla organization, the PLO, also has appeared, including that by a group of 25 Christian specialists on Jewish-Christian affairs.

They issued a message to Arafat through an ad in the New York Times, protesting the United Nations invitation to him because "you speak only for a group publicly committed to the murder of innocents" and to "tactics of terror."

The Christian leaders said that the Palestinian people had not chosen Arafat to speak for them and that for the United Nations to deal with him may propel humanity "closer to a catastrophic war."

"Your organization is not only a menace to Israel — a U.N. member which you have pledged to destroy in one manner or another — it is a menace to all humanity," said the group, including several noted Catholic and Protestant theologians and organizational officers.

Among them were the Rev. Edward H. Flanner, head of the U.S. Roman Catholic Secretariat for Catholic-Jewish Relations, and the Rev. Dr. William L. Weiler, head of a new Office on Christian-Jewish Relations of the National Council of Churches, embracing most major Protestant denominations.

However, at one of the recent Christian-Jewish forums on the issue, the council's deputy general secretary, the Rev. Dr. David R. Hunter, said action of the Arab states in designating the PLO to represent Palestinians made dealing with it a necessary strategy.

He said it could open "a new period of political activity" for the Palestinians in which "the need for violence and terrorism will have ended." Noting that he was speaking only for himself, not the council, he added:

"Any alternative to accepting the representation now designated by the Arab states will certainly push further into the future any negotiations around a common table ... That really means that the alternative will be war."

At the same seminar, held at a church center across the street from the United Nations, Israel's former foreign minister, Abba Eban, said Palestinians not only did not elect Arafat to represent them but most of them already were represented through the mainly Palestinian state of Jordan adjoining Israel.

"A world that can afford 20 Arab states," he said, "is going to have to afford one Jewish state."

Faith, moral values topics for U.S. bishops

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Attention to prayer, moral values and a renewal of faith will be stressed during the U.S. Catholic Bishops' annual meeting here Monday through Friday.

Among the top agenda items will be a report on promotion of Christian moral values in contemporary society; a report on the results of the recent world Synod of Bishops in Rome; and a proposed statement on ecumenism.

A draft of a proposed statement on capital punishment, formulated by the committee on social development and world peace, was sent to all the U.S. bishops for input. A final draft will be considered and voted on during the meeting.

The bishops also will consider a proposal on ecumenism, which marks the 10th anniversary of the Vatican II Decree on ecumenism and which details progress made in that area during the last decade.

The new Billy Graham film, "The Gospel Road," will be shown at 7 p.m. Sunday at the First Assembly of God Church. Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter, are featured, with specially written songs about the life of Christ, in this production, which was filmed in Israel.

It is open to the public without charge, but there will be a free will offering.

Algoma singers will be at St. Bernadette

The Algoma Young People, a group of 40 high school and college students, will present a concert at 7 p.m. Sunday at St. Bernadette Catholic Church.

Mission appeal topic for Prince of Peace seminars

An educational program to acquaint pastors and laymen in area American Lutheran Church (ALC) congregations with the synod's united mission appeal has been set at Prince of Peace Church.

The program will be at 7 p.m. Thursday and again on Dec. 5. A representative from the district office of ALC will lead the discussions.

This is the educational portion of the appeal, which will run through 1977. The January emphasis will be on commitment.

One of ALC's leading churchmen, the Rev. Dr. E.M. Hegge of Stoughton, will kick off the event by preaching this Sunday at Prince of Peace.

The minister, now retired, is a graduate of St. Olaf College and Luther Theological Seminary. He served in the Navy in World War I.

Hegge served in China from 1924-27, when he was forced to leave due to the revolution. He accepted a call to Moscow, Idaho, and later moved to Tacoma, Wash., where he had a pulpit but also served as chaplain of the McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary.

Through the years Hegge has been in leadership positions with the synod. He was on the board of foreign missions for 13 years, on the lectureship roster of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs and went on an inspection tour of the South African and Madagascar mission fields.

His last active call was in Eau Claire, where he served for more than 16 years. He observed his 50th anniversary of ordination this June.

The ALC mission appeal program involves endeavors here and abroad. The money is spent on such things as beginning new congregations, building churches, assisting the poor and hungry throughout the world and working through the mass media to reach the people.

Petri bids for Senate minority leadership

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — State Sen. Thomas Petri, R-Fond du Lac, the freshman legislator who recently lost in his long-shot bid to unseat U.S. Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., has announced plans to try to take over leadership of the Republican Senate minority.

Petri, 34, represents the state's 2nd Senate District that runs from northern Washington County in the south, along the east side of Lake Winnebago to the south side of Green Bay on the north.

In a letter mailed to the other 13 Republican senators this week, Petri made it clear that he is hoping his recent statewide campaign against Nelson will serve as a springboard to a leadership post.

He wrote that the Republican party should open itself to young people who have "sensible new ideas." Petri also said it was important that the Senate minority elect someone who has a "measure of public recognition."

Petri becomes the third Republican to announce his intention to seek the floor leadership that is being vacated by Eleva Sen. Raymond Johnson, who did not seek re-election this year. Merrill Sen. Clifford Krueger, a veteran of 25 years in the Senate, is also a candidate and generally is considered to be the favorite. Former Majority Leader Ernest Keppler of Sheboygan, who was unseated by Johnson two years ago, also is running for the post.

The Republicans will elect a minority leader for the first time in 82 years in the Senate. The Democrats will hold a 19-14 majority in the upper house when the next session begins, although two seats will require special elections to be filled.

Petri's quest for the floor leadership was seen by one of his Republican colleagues as "an obvious attempt to take advantage of his statewide campaign. He thinks we should promote him for future statewide campaigns."

It was expected that Petri would seek the job as assistant minority leader since Krueger apparently had the votes and is regarded as one of the most popular members of the Senate. If Petri does not change his mind and run for the assistant's job, it is expected that the position will be filled by either Greenfield Sen. James Devitt or Wausau Sen. Walter Chilsen.

Counties to meet on UWFV

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Outagamie County followed the lead of its partner in the University of Wisconsin Center-Fox Valley and decided Friday to appoint a special committee to study the future physical plant needs at the school.

A resolution to appropriate $50,000 toward the purchase of 10 acres of land adjacent to the campus on Midway Road in Menasha was tabled until after the special committee, to be appointed by County Board Chairman Eugene Higgins, meets with its counterpart from Winnebago County.

Winnebago County took a similar action Monday.

The land has been made available for $100,000 on a 10-year land contract at 4 per cent interest. The two counties share equally in the cost of providing the physical plant for the school. The state pays all personnel costs.

Prior to tabling the resolution, a proposal to put $5,000 in the budget, which would represent Outagamie's share of one year's payment on a land contract, was voted down.

Supv. Eugene Kloes questioned whether the additional land was actually needed to expand the school. A gymnasium has been listed as a top priority.

Supv. Nick Karras, chairman of the dual county trustees, conceded that there was room to expand on the present site, but, he said, it would be at the expense of the parking lot, soccer fields and front lawn.

Previously, the board had approved its one-half of the estimated $29,000 cost for some interior remodeling to provide additional classroom and study area space.

The total maintenance budget for the facility, including the remodeling, is $108,785 with each county paying one-half.

The county board also created the position of legislative secretary, but left until later to define the qualifications and duties of the position. Supervisors put $16,400 in the county board budget to fund the position.

The decision on the need for the position was far from unanimous and a proposed set of qualifications and duties drew even more debate before being withdrawn.

Supv. Harold Miller questioned the need for the position, saying the board could end up with another administrator if it relied on someone else for information. "If we started cooperating and quit choosing sides we would not have the problem," he said.

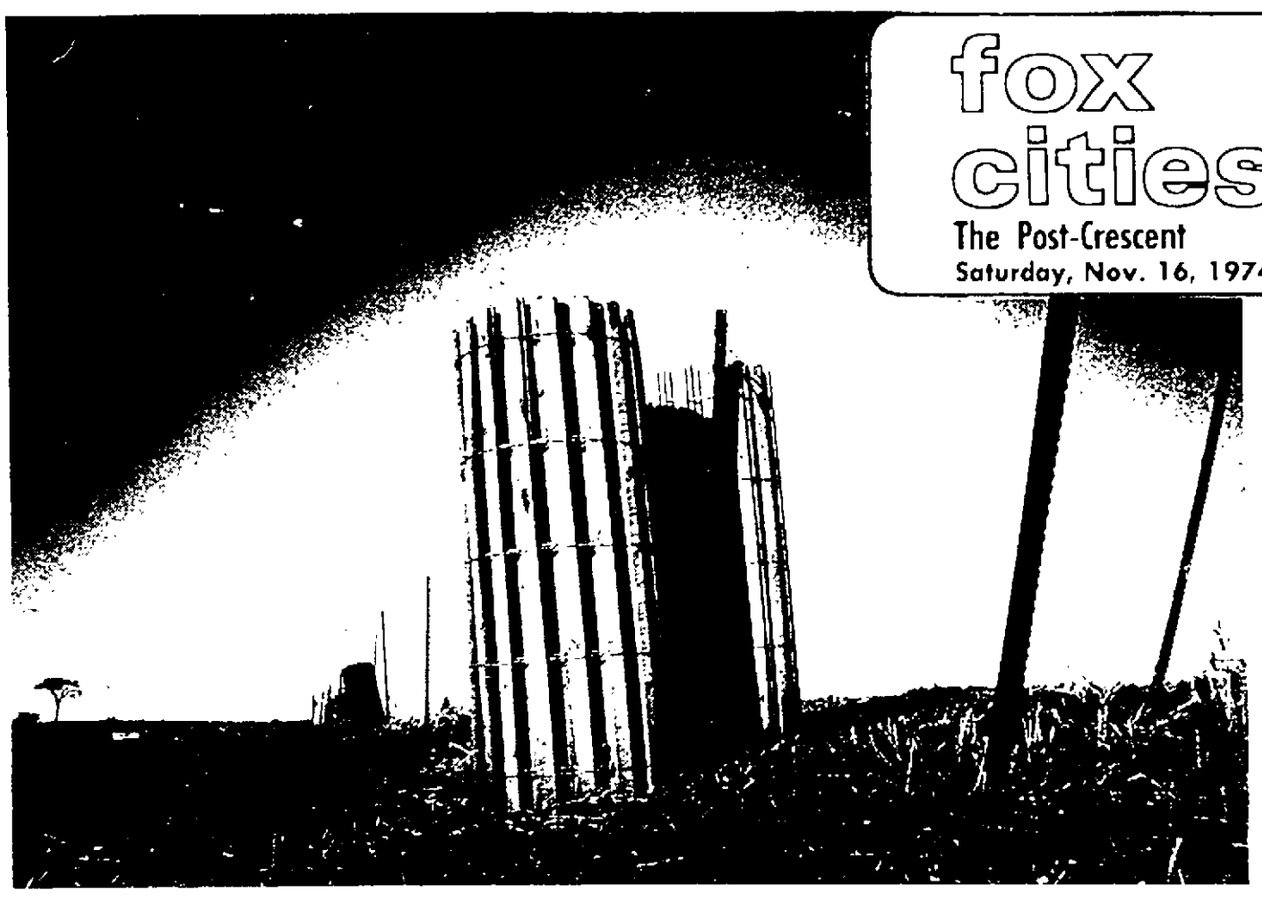

Supv. R. Clayton Van Dyke termed the position just an attempt to get rid of the corporation counsel.

Finance Committee Chairman John Schreiter said the board needed a person to provide supervisors with "objective facts."

A number of supervisors indicated they favored the position, but questioned the proposed list of duties. Supv. Judith Hebbe questioned whether one person could do everything on the list. "It's impossible for one man to do all this," added Supv. Roland Voss.

Supv. Daniel Williams suggested that half of the duties were functions of the county clerk's office. "Jack him up and make him do his work," he said.

The coordinating committee was given the job of coming up with a new job description.

Session set on Meade project

An informational session that will go a long way in deciding major north-south traffic carriers on Appleton's near east side will be held Tuesday afternoon and evening at Fire Station No. 1.

The session will be the held by the Department of Public Works in an effort to design a reconstruction plan for Meade Street between College Avenue and Hancock Street.

A decision to keep the street residential will leave Lawe Street the major north-south carrier and require the widening of that street in the future.

A decision to widen Meade into part of a one-way or two-way couplet with Lawe Street would mean an end to its present residential status.

The informational session Tuesday will run from 1:30 to 3:30 and 7 to 9 p.m. Meade Street residents, redevelopment authority and plan commission members and others have been invited.

Lawe Street residents — who put up a successful fight to keep the city from widening their street to 44 feet last year — are also expected to attend the session.

Public works will bring their residential and throughway proposals for Meade Street to the plan commission for a recommendation on Nov. 25. A public hearing is planned for mid-December. The department will then make its own recommendation.

The street is slated for reconstruction in 1976. Preliminary planning steps must be taken care of early in order for the city to qualify for possible federal aids for the project, should it be reconstructed as a major urban street.

The basic alternates formulated by the department are to make Meade:

— A residential street, either a uniform 28 or 32 feet wide and possibly with a cul de sac or cutoff at College Avenue and limited access north of Hancock.

— A through street, 32 feet wide at a minimum but possibly as wide as 34 feet, making it eligible as a one-way or two-way couplet with Lawe Street as the major traffic carriers in the area.

At an informational session earlier this year, Meade Street residents indicated they wanted the residential status of the street preserved.

If that is done, Lawe Street will remain the only major traffic carrier in the area and will require widening to 44 or 48 feet to accomodate traffic coming from the southeast and north sides.

Lawe Street was planned for widening to 44 feet in 1973, but resident opposition led the City Council to narrow the reconstruction project to 32 feet, with parking eliminated on one side.

The department, recognizing that Lawe Street is underdesigned to meet current traffic flows, believes relief will have to come either through a widening of Meade to help Lawe Street handle the traffic or a widening of Lawe to handle all of it.

The city's comprehensive plan designated Lawe Street the major north-south traffic carrier in 1966, but that plan is currently being updated.

If Meade Street is kept residential, it could also be designed as part of a court street pattern along with Washington and Rankin streets, cutting off access of both Meade and Rankin to College Avenue.

But designation as a residential street would also require, in the minds of public works engineers, the coupling of Meade and Lawe streets on the north. That could occur either north or south of Wisconsin Avenue, but the coupling would be required to eliminate the troublesome intersection at Lawe and Wisconsin.

The crossover would move traffic onto Lawe Street south of Wisconsin but bring Lawe and Meade together for the intersection at the present Meade-Wisconsin intersection.

The decisions made on Meade Street will probably influence the city's comprehensive planners in how they design major north-south traffic arteries on the near east side.

'No evidence of high-speed chase' in incident involving county officer

OSHKOSH — Although finding "an error in judgment," the Winnebago County Judiciary and Public Safety Committee Friday decided no further action is needed in the case of a county police officer who was arrested by the Oshkosh Police Department two weeks ago.

The officer, Lt. Robert Berrell, was arrested after what the Oshkosh police officer described as a high-speed chase north out of Oshkosh on County Trunk A.

The committee met Friday in closed session to review investigative reports compiled by two sheriff department lieutenants which indicated that nothing more than a stop sign citation was warranted.

Supv. James Greiner, committee chairman, issued a statement after the meeting which indicated that the committee found:

— That the report compiled by Lts. Edward Misch and Wilbur Fuller was "comprehensive and complete."

— That no action by the county sheriff department other than the apprehension assist need be taken.

— That Berrell had made an error in judgment by not stopping for a stop sign, "but the committee felt that this is being acknowledged by the city's citation issued."

Reportedly, Berrell was spotted by Oshkosh policeman Michael Novetny, headed north on Harrison Street. Novetny said the car went through a stop sign at Murdock and Harrison and continued north.

He turned around and pursued and called the county sheriff department for assistance when the chase reached 90 miles an hour.

A county squad car, driven by James O'Bright, joined the chase and stopped the car about four miles north of Oshkosh.

Greiner said Friday there was nothing to indicate that Berrell was traveling anywhere near the reported speed of the pursuing city squad car.

Greiner cited statements by the city officer which suggested that the squad had motor troubles and fell behind. Novetny also said that when the car began to run properly he began "gaining substantially" on the car driven by Berrell.

Greiner said the 90 m.p.h. speed was probably necessary to make up the distance lost when the car was not running properly.

Greiner said the committee used the reports compiled by Misch and Fuller and had asked Sheriff Marvin Peppler, and Corp. Counsel County Executive Orrin King Gerald Engledinger to sit in on the session.

Greiner said he was satisfied that Berrell had not tried to outrun the city officer because the distance between the cars would indicate that he may not have seen the flashing red lights.

Greiner also pointed to the fact that Berrell pulled over as soon as the county squad, also with its lights flashing, pulled up behind him.

Outagamie park plan gets okay

An expanded parks program was approved by the Outagamie County Board Friday, but a final decision on the personnel to operate it will not be made until Monday night.

The board, now in its annual budget session, has failed to come up with a final budget document after four full days and one night of debate and will return at 7 p.m. Monday with little expectation of finishing then.

By a narrow margin the board approved of a full summer recreation program at Plamann Park similar to that offered at municipal parks

But the personnel question got stalled amid confusion and is to be acted upon Monday night. An initial request from the property, building and maintenance committee to add a full-time park director, one additional full-time maintenance man, a part-time maintenance man and several part-time workers for the swimming lake and newly-acquired ski hill got trimmed by mutual agreement after a caucus with the personnel committee.

The new manning chart calls for only the addition of a park director and one part-time maintenance employe. The board had already approved the funding for the ski hill and lake positions in those budgets, Supv. Nick Karras, property committee chairman, said.

The board has approved an operating budget of $41,789 for Plamann Park, including the summer recreation program. Salaries for the park director and to run the recreation programs would add $15,100 to that budget.

The lake budget has been set at $25,431, but Karras indicated an adjustment would also have to be made there because of an error. The ski hill budget is $9,080.

Another park budget calls for spending $19,450 for Barker Park and four access sites operated by the county. The total includes $16,500 for a small shelter house at Barker Park. The Mosquito Hill budget is $11,210.

The board also approved $120,000 for the next phase of Plamann Park development, contingent on 50 per cent federal LAWCON funding and only after the county has received full reimbursement from the federal program for the first phase of the development. Karras said those funds should be received before the end of this year.

The development plan, most of which will be taken up with an all-year shelter building, drew some comment when Supv. Robert Weyenberg questioned if the expenditures went beyond the total originally approved by the county board.

In 1972 the board approved a three-phase program that was to cost a total of $183,000, shared equally by the county and LAWCON funds. Weyenberg contended the new appropriation, which would again be offset by LAWCON funds, went beyond the original $91,500 county commitment.

Karras and Supv. Eugene Kloes disputed this, but said they could not establish one way or the other how much county money has been committed to date.

Oshkosh robber gets narcotics

OSHKOSH — A man armed with a revolver and wearing a blue ski mask over his face held up Propson's Pharmacy, 901 Jackson St., here Friday night and fled with several types of narcotic drugs.

Police said the gunman, described as slim and between five feet, eight inches and six feet tall, ordered a clerk to the rear of the store shortly before 8 p.m., then ordered the pharmacist and store owner, Sylvester Propson, to hand over narcotics at gunpoint.

Authorities said Propson gave the man a vial of morphine, some capsules and other codeine-based narcotics.

Police said a customer who entered the store while the robbery was in progress was also ordered to the back of the store.

Police said the man wore a shiny parka and jeans.

Two shooting ranges open for sighting guns

Both the Outagamie Conservation Club and Appleton Rifle and Pistol Club are making available their firing ranges for hunters who want to target in rifles or shotguns for the deer season.

The Outagamie Conservation Club is located on Mayflower Road north of Appleton and the Appleton Rifle and Pistol Club is north of the city on Rifle Range Road.

Individuals from each organization will be at hand at the ranges today and Sunday to supervise shooters who will be sighting in firearms.

Spotting scopes will be available at both ranges and club members will provide instruction for shooters. Fees will be charged at both ranges.

All dressed up

National Children's Book Week, which ended Friday, was observed with a dress-up party at Appleton's Highlands School, with everyone arriving as his favorite book character. Kerry Gresens, above, chose Mary Poppins for her favorite, while Darrin Wroblewski, right, showed some favoritism to the animal world, coming as the Cat in the Hat. The storyteller at the party was the one person who knows all about book characters — the librarian, Marcie Kinney, who showed up as Heidi, right. (Post-Crescent photos)

Driver ruled negligent after inquest into death

OSHKOSH — A coroner's inquest into the July death of a Neenah girl who was struck by a car while riding her bicycle near her home ended here Friday with a jury verdict that the driver of the car was not criminally negligent.

The jury ruled, however, that Glen A. Thayer, 24, of Winnebago, was negligent in that he failed to exercise proper care and traffic safety in the accident that claimed the life of 17-year-old Barbara R. Madsen, 1156 N. Lake St.

Miss Madsen was struck by Thayer's car as she rode along N. Lake Street a short distance from her home on the afternoon of July 19. She suffered a skull fracture and died four days later at Theda Clark Memorial Hospital.

The inquest before Winnebago County Coroner Duane I. Moore in the county courthouse was scheduled after apparent conflicts between Thayer's statement about the accident and a sheriff's department investigation of the fatality.

Thayer, one of nine witnesses testifying at Friday's inquest, said Miss Madsen's had veered in front of his car as both were travelling north on N. Lake Street, and that he did not see the girl in time to avoid striking her.

He also testified that he was driving 40 to 45 miles per hour in a 35 m.p.h. zone at the time.

Deputy Sheriff David Schuetzendorf, however, told the six-member jury that his examination of the accident site and Thayer's auto indicated that the victim had not suddenly veered into the car's path.

Schustzendorf, among six police officers testifying at the inquest, said it was his opinion that Thayer's car actually had swerved to the right, striking Miss Madsen's bicycle and dragging it along the right side of the road.

The jury was instructed to rule that the accident was the result of either homicide by the negligent use of a vehicle, ordinary negligence or that Thayer was not negligent at all.

This is the Kickapoo River Valley, to be flooded by a dam.

Tragedy on the Kickapoo

A tragedy, carefully prepared after nearly 40 years of studies, may be taking place now in a tucked-away corner of Vernon County near LaFarge.

It is the damming of the Kickapoo River by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Corps is working daily to complete a 3,950 foot-long earthenwork embankment that will contain some 50 to 60 feet of water and create a lake stretching over some 1,860 acres. The lake bed would be the valley of the Kickapoo — an area where the meandering river twists between hills, rock ledges and farm fields on its southern journey to the Wisconsin River. That's the valley at the dam site in the picture above.

It is the wandering nature of the Kickapoo that makes it beautiful, tranquil and diverse in it's calm moments.

But the Kickapoo has another side, a violent side, for during spring run-off water swells the stream and as it tries to escape the steep hillsides causes severe flooding. Six times, since 1935, large floods have swept through the valley damaging farms, homes and villages.

So today people are hurt by flooding when the Kickapoo rampages. The Corps project is designed, partly, to stop that. But it is also designed for recreation, fish and wildlife benefit and area redevelopment.

The lake, already dubbed Lake LaFarge, is to bring a new recreation industry to the area, according to proposals. The University of Wisconsin in analyzing the impoundment came to the conclusion that Lake LaFarge "will be highly eutrophic," full of weeds and algae scum.

Biologists have said fishing may be enhanced. Generally wildlife could benefit from the project if managed correctly. But this management might conflict in some cases with the need to manage weeds and lake smells.

Then too there is the loss, impossible to measure in dollar value, of a uniquely attractive river valley. There aren't many like it left.

Already the valley is changing because recreational businesses are moving in, and they are pressing for the dam. So are land speculators who have invested heavily in the area. But we simply cannot go on selling off beauty for profit.

The tragedy is all the more real, because there is an alternative.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson has proposed that the dam be completed as a dry dam, used merely for temporary water containment. A Corps source questioned this, saying costs of the project would rise and that mud flats would result, contending that straightening of the downstream Kickapoo would be necessary.

Nelson's plan should at least be given a chance. The way it's going now, the Corps is paying $35 million for a smelly lake that may only be the beginning of more complicated problems.

Is our water dangerous?

More than a year ago the U.S. Senate passed legislation setting water standards on a national level. A similar bill has been stalled in the House of Representatives, with opposition from the oil industry. A recent order by the Environmental Protection Agency may help get the House to do something about water quality.

The EPA has ordered an immediate nationwide study of chemical contaminants in drinking water after an agency study showed that 66 chemicals were present in Mississippi River water used in New Orleans and other rivers in Louisiana. Some of the chemicals are known to be dangerous.

There was carbon tetrachloride, which causes liver cancer in mice exposed to high levels. The pesticides dieldrin and endrin, suspected of having cancer causing properties, were also present, plus chemicals known to be highly toxic.

Russell Train, agency administrator, said for two years the EPA has been trying to determine whether chlorination may be contributing. Some studies indicate that chlorine may react with other chemicals to produce the dangerous compounds

A private organization, the Environmental Defense Fund, takes a more serious view of the situation. Its own report says there is suggestive evidence that the chemical contamination could be linked to the high level of cancer deaths in some Louisiana counties

The American Chemical Society's findings that high levels of cancer causing asbestos fibers are present along the western shore of Lake Superior was a long time in coming. A great many people were exposed. The EPA should move as fast as it can in investigating the problem. And the House of Representatives should pass sound water quality legislation quickly.

Here I sit, readin' boxcars

BY PETER BACH

NEENAH-MENASHA — These trains have me playing the waiting game again.

Here I am, stuck in traffic. The red signal lights are flashing, the warning bell is gonging and the 4:20 is coming around the bend, rumbling across the S. Commercial Street crossing.

Peter Bach is a reporter for the Twin City News-Record, published by The Post-Crescent in Neenah-Menasha. He covers the City of Menasha beat.

The engine is lugging five, 10, 20...argh, why count the cars. It's a dizzying number.

The bumper sticker on the van truck idling in front me says, "Happiness is Having Twins." I read it and I smile. I have plenty of time to read it. In fact, most of what I'll be reading the next few minutes will be the scrawls of graffiti on the sides of boxcars.

Behind me, the driver is cursing. I notice the irate motorist open his window and shake his fist at the engineer. For the principle of the thing, I do the add 1 same. The engineer leers back.

Through the sporadic break between the moving cars, I notice a station wagon which is the first in the line of traffic heading in the opposite direction. I notice it because the wooden gate guarding the crossing has come knifing down onto the hood of the car. The lady behind the wheel is gingerly backing up to get out from under. She is mouthing some vile expressions.

Our joint frustration — unpredictable railroad traffic — is a matter of routine in these two industrial sister cities. Switching operations involving crossings at major arterials are commonplace here. The Twin Cities' vibrant paper industry depends on the railroads as a vital link in the production chain. So do other cities and industries.

But the barrage of railroad activity here, seemingly heaviest during rush hours, is undoubtedly unsurpassed anywhere else in the Fox Valley for the sheer paralytic effect on traffic. And the demoralization of the community's citizens.

One trip through by an outsider is all it takes to prove that.

The railroad industry does just fine in Neenah-Menasha, thank you. But down through the decades, motorists have retaliated in a variety of ways. And various businesses have thrived because of it.

Consider that the Twin Cities railroad activity has:

— Meant booming business for the men who reline brakes, install shocks, do front end alignments and sell stop watches.

— Produced the only union contract history that forgives tardiness, for trains.

— Evoked epithets so vile that even "expletive deleted" has to be deleted.

— Made Indian givers out of devoted fathers who gave their kids Lionel sets last Christmas.

— Meant traffic is at a virtual standstill when combined with new pipe work in Menasha (which occurs almost all the time) and road destruction-construction in Neenah (which occurs all the time) and the school crossing guards, who wave stop signs at intersections not otherwise bisected by railroad tracks.

— Struck terror in the hearts of veteran ambulance drivers as the frantic message crackles over the radio, "...But Main, Winneconne and Cecil are blocked..."

— And triggered truly bizarre driving habits near the Neenah Foundry, where motorists looking for an escape route have turned a placid sidestreet into a major thoroughfare.

Is this progress, Casey Jones? And a note to Walter Schirra: America's railroads, who needs them? Ask anybody in Neenah-Menasha.

Smoking ban gives nonsmokers clout

It is safe to predict that a number of New Yorkers will be going up in smoke, now that the city's new municipal ordinance has gone into effect. The latter forbids smoking in college libraries, supermarkets, indoor meetings and virtually every place else where people are spatially confined. Some stubborn types may indeed go down in smoke: On conviction, they can put you in the slammer for a year and fine you $1,000. The reaction has been mixed: Dedicated smokers are enraged at what they see as a violation of their rights; those who hate smoke are cheering; but the real question is, "Will it work?"

If anyone is counting on a jury sending somebody off for a year because he smoked a cigarette in a supermarket, the answer is obviously, "No." However, the ordinance does provide considerable psychological support to those persons who, detesting smoke, are reluctant to make a fuss when someone lights up in an elevator. True, the selfishness of the determined smoker cannot be underrated (one critic told New York's health commissioner that nonsmokers should "wear gas masks!"), but the fact that you have the law behind you, and — if worse comes to worse — can call a cop, gives a private complaint some clout.

To say this is not to condemn smoking. I have smoked cigars and pipes since college. (Or, to be precise, I shifted to cigars during World War II, when the only tobacco in the PX was "Red Dog," a product designed, I gathered, for tobacco chewers. When used in a pipe it smelled like a tar paper factory during in a fog.) Yet I always have had immense sympathy for the antismokers because I can't stand cigarette smoke: It makes my eyes water. This eccentricity has led me to challenge the rules applied by airlines and AMTRAK which permit cigarette smoking in the appropriate section, but bar pipes and cigars. That has been a nonstarter, so I retire to the "No Smoking" areas where nobody can start me weeping. (It is interesting that, on the basis of medical research, which indicates that cigarettes are far more dangerous than pipes or cigars, we don't get the break.)

As far as smoking in crowded quarters is concerned, I am completely on the side of the New York ordinance. I have spent a good deal of time in smoke-filled rooms, both political and academic, and by and large they are thoroughly squalid. Ashtrays full of butts spilling over onto the floor, the inevitable cigarette burns on furniture and that murky atmosphere. (Feeling guilty over my past contributions, I resolved some years ago to just chew on a dead pipe. This touched off some bush-league psychoanalysis, but our daughter had long before delivered the coup de grace: When she was about 5, I gave her a lecture on thumb sucking, to which she blandly replied, "But, Daddy, you have your pipe." I abandoned the field gracefully.)

One of my most vivid recollections is of teaching a seminar in one of those hermetically sealed classrooms right after a class in which everyone must have been smoking "Red Dog." It was like being hit by a noxious fog bank. The rule of thumb I have evolved with respect to smoking in classrooms is to segregate the smokers in one area, if the room is big enough. On the other hand, with a small seminar in a small room, I permit a liberum veto; that is, if any individual does not want to work in a smoky environment, he and she can call the shot. And nobody, including me, smokes. (If any nicotine addict feels put out by this, I recommend snuff!)

In short, while I believe anyone has the right to challenge the actuarial tables by smoking (or by busting a fifth of whisky a day, for that matter), I see no grounds for complaint by smokers when their ability to stink up other people's environment is limited. One of the key dimensions of a civilized society is the right to privacy, and having cigarette (or pipe or cigar) smoke blown in your face is, on the symbolic level, as much of a trepass as burglary. Good for New York. The ordinance may be somewhat Quixotic, but it is an assertion of the right of individuals to be freed from pulmonary trespass.

A new socialism aborning in Greece

ATHENS — "How did a nice girl like you wind up in a dirty profession like this?" was the question that had to be asked when I had dinner with Melina Mercouri here the other night. For the star of "Never on Sunday" has cast movies aside to be a candidate in the Greek elections Sunday. And her candidacy describes fully the whole range of present Greek politics — from the bitter infighting of the left to the fears of a right-wing coup which are almost certainly going to yield a big victory for former Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis.

By way of reply to the question, Mercouri first flashed the famous smile and the big wink. "I made one horrible mistake when I came back to Greece after the military junta was ousted," she said. "I promised to be available for anything that would help freedom. I thought they would want me to sing. I was prepared, though it may seem shocking, to do a striptease in public. Instead I was asked to be a candidate and I couldn't refuse."

Since Mercouri has been known for her Communist sympathies I asked her why she wasn't running for one of the Communist parties which have just been made legitimate in Greece. She pointed out that the Greek Communists were split between a local party and a Moscow party. She said that both groups, in order to get and keep their status as legal parties, were pulling their punches. "They are my friends," she said. "But they have become timid. I can't stand that."

I then asked Mercouri about the party she does support. It is a new left organization called the Pan-Hellenic Socialist Movement (or PASOK) and led by Andreas Papandreou, the son of the late Prime Minister George Papandreou.

"Andreas," Mercouri said, "is living our history. Greece suffered a terrible defeat after the war when the resistance was crushed. The country never has been liberated since. But Andreas knows how to inspire the Greek people. He says that he can win, that we can achieve our goals, that we can bscome independent."

Direct evidence of the Papandreou appeal came after dinner when we watched the television news. He was in Larissa just south of Mt. Olympus talking to a large and enthusiastic crowd, including many students. With his round face, perfectly straight features, balding head and blazing eyes, he looked the part of an ancient Athenian orator. He talked without notes, and the stuff he served was hot.

He spoke of "Greece for the Greeks — not for the king or the Americans." He wanted a free university, and better health service, and no middlemen between farmers and consumers, and more jobs so that "parents won't have to raise their sons to work in Germany."

"He's Shakespeare," Mercouri said when the speech was over, and then went off to weep a little. It may well be that Papandreou does represent a new brand of socialism which has outflanked the Communists on the left and which will be a factor all over Europe some day. But even as we watched the television it became clear why the new left would not win this time.

On the screen came George Mavros, a former foreign minister and Papandreou ally addressing a rally in Crete. He spoke in a dry, professorial tone, reading from notes. But though the tones were muted; he also expressed the impulse to rid Greece of the monarchy and to develop a foreign policy more independent of America. Plainly he and Papandreou are competing for the same constituency.

Before that, Caramanlis came on, speaking at Patras. He talked about the economy, and Greece's need to maintain connections with Europe and the United States in order to achieve growth and fight inflation. Though Mercouri joked about his stuffiness, he was — with his white hair and dark suit—the picture of solid responsibility! The statesman above the battle, not the mere politico.

Three times at dinner, moreover, Mercouri had to deal with frantic reports of rumored coups by the military or the royalists. The basic fact is that, though there is freedom here now, there is still a kind of paranoia. Greeks are nervous about keeping their liberties, and most are ready to compromise with authority — the better to avoid repression.

No doubt there is an important battle for second place between Mavros and Papandreou. But it is evident that Caramanlis, the man who has the confidence of the army, will win. As the current saying here goes: "It's either Caramanlis or the tanks again."

Geographic briefs

Legislation in 1845 directed that United States elections take place during the first week of November because "harvesting is over then, and winter has not yet made the roads impassable." Tuesday was designated instead of Monday, the National Geographic Society explains, because many voters lived a day's journey from a polling place and objected to traveling on Sunday.

Company reduces misery

Dear Ann Landers: I decided that if I heard of just one more "Anonymous," I'd write. Well, I did, so here I am. This one is Parents Anonymous, a group whose goal is to control themselves, "just for today," against abusing their children verbally or physically. I'm sure the first such group was Alcoholics Anonymous. But now we have Gamblers Anonymous, Migraines Anonymous, Cancer Anonymous, Dropouts Anonymous, Asthmatics Anonymous, Crooks Anonymous, Overeaters Anonymous, and Parents Of Youths In Trouble Anonymous. I'm sure there must be several others.

Doesn't this seem a bit much? It must say something about our society. But what? I'd like your opinion.— Letter Writer Anonymous

Dear Writer: Of course it says something, not only about our society but about humanity. The message is, "Misery loves company, but company can reduce misery and bring comfort and encouragement."

I cannot give a blanket endorsement to all "Anonymous" groups because I have not investigated them all, but I do know that many are extremely useful and strictly on the up and up—especially Alcoholics Anonymous, Gamblers Anonymous, Overeaters Anonymous—and Parents Anonymous.

The cloak of anonymity protects people from whatever shame or stigma might be placed on them by a cruel and unsympathetic society. I support the concept whole-heartedly. There is no better approach to dealing with a problem than to be able to verbalize it in the presence of others who are struggling with the same problem. Moreover, the emotional support from those who have licked the problem can be immeasurable.

Dear Ann Landers: I have another suggestion for "Veteran Of Super-market Tangles." I hope several readers will do likewise.

Take your camera and get a photograph of the line of customers waiting to get checked out. Then get another picture of the six cash registers that are just sitting there, gathering cobwebs. All pictures should be sent to the president of the chain, telling him the time of day the pictures were taken and the location of the store. —Also Fed Up In Glendale

Dear Glen: Not a bad idea. And I hope those who do it will be sure to enclose their names and addresses. Anonymous complaints don't carry nearly the clout of a signed letter.

Dear Ann Landers: I am only 14 but you'd never know it by looking at me. I could pass for 18 any day. There's this nice guy who is 27 years old and he has asked me for the third time to go out with him. I felt sort of uneasy about it and decided to tell him exactly how old I was. He said it didn't make any difference to him. Should I go out with him for the experience or should I refuse? Please, Ann, help me. I don't know what to say.—Pie-Face

Dear Face: Say no. You don't need the "experience" —and he should have his head examined.

Dear Ann Landers: I have difficulty sleeping and I don't want to get into the habit of taking sleeping pills. Can you tell me, please, what to do about the woman who lives in the apartment above us? There must be no carpeting or rugs in that apartment because I hear her all hours of the day and night, clomping around in hard shoes. She is a pleasant person and I don't want to start any trouble. Would sound-proofing my ceiling help?— Shattered Nerves

Dear S.N.: It would be much cheaper if you invited her to have a cup of coffee and in a tactful manner explained the problem and presented her with some carpet slippers. (Copyright 1974)

Kaukauna gets 3 bids for transmission lines

KAUKAUNA — The electric and water utility has received three bids for three miles of 138 volt transmission lines for a new substation at Combined Locks.

Ernest Mullen, utility manager, and Arthur Hendricks, utility superintendent, will analyze the bids and award the contract to the lowest bidder who meets all specifications.

The project includes eight tower foundations, steel poles and conductors for the substation.

In other business, the commission authorized Mullen to advertise for bids on two pick-up trucks, and to prepare specifications for drapes, floor coverings and wallpaper for the remodeling of utility offices.

Precaution rules out need for difficult guess

BY ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes an absurdly simple precaution will relieve you of an agonizing guess.

Declarer won the opening diamond lead and went after dummy's long hearts lickety-split. But then South had to decide what to discard on dummy's queen of hearts.

If the hearts were not going to break, South would need a fourth spade or a fourth club for his thirteenth trick.

GUESSES WRONG

South discarded a club, reasoning that the spades would produce a fourth trick even if the suit broke 4-2, provided the jack were doubleton. The clubs would produce a fourth trick even if the suit broke 4-2, provided the jack were doubleton. The clubs would produce a fourth trick only with a 3-3 break.

This is the time for tears. Neither spades nor hearts broke and South was down one at his grand slam contract.

Of course you've seen the simple precaution that would have saved the agony and grand slam. South should cash his top cards in both black suits before tackling the hearts. If either black suit breaks, he will know about it at once. There will be no need to guess.

In fact, even if neither suit breaks South is still alive and breathing. Declarer takes the other top diamonds, discarding a low heart from dummy. If the defender with four hearts also has the only stopper in either black suit, he will be unable to discard safely.

DAILY QUESTION

As dealer, you hold: S- A K 10, H- K Q 10 6 3, C- A K 5. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid 2 NT. You might get to 3 NT and lose too many diamond tricks, but it is not completely safe to open so strong a hand with just one heart. Partner might pass with 4 or 5 high-card points, and you would miss a laydown game.

Health care bill planned by Lorge

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — Sen. Gerald Lorge of Bear Creek said Friday that he has prepared for introduction into the state Legislature in January an omnibus health care bill that will provide greater benefits than any of the national health care proposals now stalled in the U.S. Congress.

Lorge said his measure is a model plan drafted by the Conference of Insurance Legislators, which he headed last year. It will be presented to lawmakers in all of the 50 states.

Basic to the plan would be the pooling of health care insurers for the operation of a universal health care insurance program, including the poor whose premiums would be covered by state appropriations.

In the latter respect, the proposal resembles a recommendation made more than a year ago by a health care task force study group named by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey.

Lorge is now the chairman of the state Senate Committee on Insurance, but he will give up that seat in January when the Democrats take over control of the Legislature's upper house.

He said that among the provisions of the proposal are catastrophic health care benefits for all persons up to $250,000, provision of all health care benefits as well as preventive care, doctor and hospital treatment.

Only private and existing health insurers would be involved.

The pool of insurers to be created by law would provide standard benefits for the poor, the near poor and those previously uninsurable for health reasons.

Group will recommend UW salary increases

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — The University of Wisconsin's Central Administration will recommend to the UW System Board of Regents next week that faculty and academic staff salaries and compensation be increased 17 per cent next year and 13 per cent the year after.

In a report that will be submitted to the Regents for possible inclusion in the UW's biennial operating budget request, Central Administration is asking for adjustments to reward individual excellence, and special adjustments to give the faculty and staff some money they failed to receive in the 1973-75 biennium.

Release of Central Administration's recommendations comes just two days after the announcement of a UW faculty request for an 18 per cent raise in benefits and salary.

The faculty compensation issue is certain to be grouped with a Regent proposal to lower student tuition by 1976-77 and increase the state subsidy. UW officials are insisting, however, that the two issues remain separate.

If eventually approved by the legislature and Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, the salary and benefit adjustment would cost the state an additional $36 million in 1975-76 and $33.2 million in 1976-77.

Central Administration is asking for a cost-of-living adjustments for faculty and staff salaries effective on July 1 of each year of the biennium. Estimates are that such increases would give the faculty and staff an 11 per cent raise next year and an 8 per cent raise the year after.

In addition, UW officials are asking the legislature to consider the adoption of a quarterly cost-of-living escalator clause for all state employes, and employer pick-up of the remaining employe share of retirement and health insurance cocs costs.

While the cost-of-living increases represent the largest share of the proposed 13 per cent, merit pay adjustments would make up another 4 per cent next year and 5 per cent the year after. The special adjustment to correct a portion of income lost in 1973-74 would comprise 2 per cent of the increase next year.

Central Administration is also asking for post-retirement group health insurance premium payment.

University statistics that accompanied the compensation recommendations show that while the average real per capita income has increased 16 per cent nationally and 14 per cent statewide in the last seven years, faculty real income has actually declined 3.5 per cent.

The report also states real income for Wisconsin's public school teachers has increased 13 per cent during the same period.

The recommended increases will be the subject of a public hearing to be conducted by the Board of Regents Nov. 22 in Madison.

Police & fire beat

Police are investigating two more reports of thefts from Appleton High School-West, which raises to four the number of such incidents reported there this week.

In reports received Thursday, Mark Lemons, 2318 N. Drew St., told police he lost a watch, wallet with cash and a pair of blue jeans valued together at $71 from a locker, while Susan Wilmsen, 2025 N. Eugene St., said she had $33 taken from her wallet in the commons area. The incidents took place Wednesday and Monday, respectively.

Mrs. Robert Tesch, 553 Riford Road, Neenah, told Appleton police she lost $50 Thursday at Pronge's downtown store.

Lobbyist works to override school board election veto

Post Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — The executive secretary of the Wisconsin Association of School Boards (WASB) is lobbying hard in an effort to convince the Legislature to override a veto by Gov. Patrick J. Lucey and allow school districts to elect board members at annual meetings.

George Tipler, Winneconne, said Friday that he hopes the one-sided support given to the bill by both houses of the Legislature last year will carry over into the veto session that begins Tuesday.

Lucey vetoed the entire bill because of his objection to provisions that would allow school districts to elect board members on the day of the annual meeting, and would also permit districts to number each seat on the board to create separate races.

The bill, which passed the Assembly 86-10 and the Senate 31-0 last year, did not carry an appropriation, so Lucey was required to veto all of it or none of it.

In 1971, the Legislature changed the law to require all school districts in the state to hold school board elections at the spring election. Previous to the passage of that bill, common and union high school districts elected their board members at the annual meeting.

In his veto message last May, Lucey argued that the spring election would provide "the best opportunity for the greatest number of persons to participate in local elections."

He further stated that the significance of the annual meeting should not depend on elections to draw a large audience.

Lucey opposed the proposal for numbered school board seats, saying the provision would eliminate the voters' right to choose from among all candidates.

Baroque Trio to play at Oshkosh

OSHKOSH — The Baroque Trio of Basel, Switzerland, will be featured in the second concert of the Chamber Arts Series at the Music Hall of the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh Arts and Communication Center at 8 p.m. Monday.

The featured soloists, August Weinzinzer and Hannelore Muller, are teachers at the Schola Cantorum Basiliensis, an institute for research and teaching of early music in Basel, Switzerland.

A copious collection of valuable original instruments helps the trio in performing the early masterpieces on the instruments for which they were composed.

Weinzinzer and Muller are widely regarded as the world's foremost performers of early music on early instruments. Their recordings for Deutsche Grammophon's Archive Series constitute the largest and most important collection of recorded early music available.

They will play music of the Baroque period on the viola da gamba, presenting music for the solo gamba as well as for two gambas. The viola da gamba is an early stringed instrument of the viol family, held between the knees and comparable in range to the cello.

They will be joined by harpsichordist Robert Conant, who in addition to accompanying them, will play a group of harpsichord solos on each half of the program. He is associate professor of music history at Chicago Musical College of Roosevelt University and formerly was on the faculty of the Yale School of Music.

Conant has played and recorded with such groups as the American Bach Society, the Deller Trio, Chamber Music Circle, Robert Shaw Chorale and has been a soloist at the Casals Festival and the Handel Festival at Halle. He was founder and director of the Baroque Festival Saratoga Springs.

The most famous Baroque masters, such as Couperin, Bach, Handel, Telemann and Graun, will be represented in Monday evening's concert. They presented a rich and interesting viol literature which cannot be transferred to any other instrument because of its noble sound and special technique.

The viol-type instruments evolved during the 15th century from their early ancestors of the Middle Ages, the vielfe and the lute. They differ from the violin family in having a flat back, slanting shoulders, higher edges, flat bridges, sound holes in C-form and six strings, tuned in fourths and a third.

Hard rock coming

Two popular "heavy" rock groups will perform at the Brown County Arena, Green Bay, Tuesday. R.E.O. Speedwagon (top) and Blue Oyster Cult (bottom) share top billing in a concert set to start at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available at Dean's Audio Boutique, Appleton, and at the door. Tickets cost $1 more at the door.

'Godfather' on television

8 - 10 — Channel 5 — One of the most talked about and viewed movies ever comes to TV as a two-parter, beginning tonight and concluding Monday. It's "The Godfather," with Marlon Brando giving an extraordinary performance as the mafia chieftain (he won an Oscar for it) and fine support from James Caan, Al Pacino, Robert Duvall, Richard Castellano, John Marley, Richard Conte and Sterling Hayden. Even with commercial interruptions, this is an event. But be warned, very little has been cut from this 1972 movie and some of the excessive violence is not suitable for children or squeamish adults.

---

12 - 1 — Channels 2-7 — "The CBS Children's Film Festival" offers "Mauro the Gypsy." The film from Scotland covers the adventures and travail of a gypsy boy while in a small Scottish village. Graeme Greenhowe stars in this American TV premiere.

---

7 - 8 — Channel 5 — "Emergency's" Squad 51 performs one of its most dangerous assignments in an attempt to rescue a woman (Rosemary Johnson) trapped in her car on the edge of an open drawbridge. A fraternity prank almost ends in tragedy, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar debuts as a tall man trapped in a small car.

---

7 - 10 — Channels 9-11 — ABC's entire prime time schedule is given over the "Where Eagles Dare," a really good World War II espionage tale with lots of excitement and a good cast headed by Richard Burton, Clint Eastwood, Mary Ure, and Michael Hodern. A 1969 release. (R)

7:30 - 8 — Channels 2-7 — Robert (Paul Sand) tries to please everybody, including his father (Jack Gilford), now a real estate salesman on "Paul Sand In Friends And Lovers." So he finds himself on the verge of buying a house and getting married, even though he really doesn't want to do either. The quiet humor of Sand and Gilford saves the day here.

---

8 - 8:30 — Channels 2-7 — Mary and Sue Ann (Betty White) go to Chicago for a convention on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show." Mary just wants to spend the first night quietly relaxing in her hotel room, but she reckons without Sue Ann's go-go attitude. Betty and Mary are very funny together but the script is slightly below par.

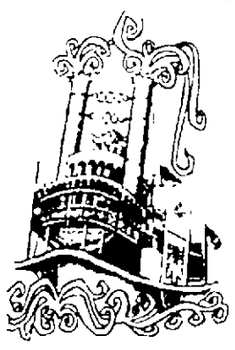

8:30 - 9 — Channels 2-7 — It's much ado about Carol's (Marcia Wallace) proposed wedding on "The Bob Newhart Show," with Richard Schaal very funny as her intended, a role he played here earlier. But if Carol really loves him, why is she letting Jerry (Peter Bonerz) kiss her?

Congress pursuing windfall tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional tax writers are getting ready for a last-ditch attempt to enact a tax on windfall oil profits and other revenue code revisions this year, but the odds appear long against it.

The House Ways and Means Committee scheduled a meeting Monday — the day Congress reconvenes from its election recess—to try to agree on a streamlined tax bill.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said Tuesday in Little Rock Congress should not wait until next year to impose an 85 per cent tax on oil company windfall profits not reinvested for increased production, and to begin phasing out the oil depletion allowance.

In addition to these provisions, the committee, where all tax legislation originates, is expected to consider proposals:

—To increase the minimum tax paid by wealthy persons with large sheltered incomes.

—To provide tax relief for low-income persons by boosting their special deduction.

—And possibly to grant tax exemption to interest earned by savings accounts as a way to encourage formation of capital to finance home mortgages.

Republican members may test sentiment on President Ford's proposal for a 5 per cent surtax on middle and upper income taxes, but there was no prospect the committee would approve it. Congressional reaction to the surtax, again boosted by Ford in a news conference in Phoenix, Ariz., Thursday, has been mainly negative.

Chrysler Corp. 'shutting down' for December

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. will shut down its U.S. car assembly plants and some manufacturing facilities for the month of December, sources in the auto industry said Friday.

Chrysler would neither confirm nor deny the report, but an industry insider said the firm ordered "zero" parts from suppliers for next week. That would indicate many component plant workers will likely be laid off along with assemblers, sources say.

Chrysler employs about 100,000 production workers. More than one-third are assemblers. If the entire system were to shut down, sources estimate 113,000 workers would be laid off.

A spokesman for the nation's No. 3 automaker said mounting inventories of unsold new cars had reached a "critical level."

It is estimated that Chrysler's stockpile of 1975 models was 380,000 on Oct. 31, enough to supply Chrysler dealers for at least 110 days. Chrysler's daily selling rate in the first 10 days of November was only 2,300.

Sales during the most recent selling period were off 34 per cent.

All U.S. auto plants shut down between Christmas and New Year's as specified in contracts with the UAW. The first large layoffs in the auto industry came last December, two months after the Mideast oil embargo began to chip away at sales.

Ford's meeting in Siberia with Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev, said Kissinger, "will give momentum to the commitment of detente" between the United States and Russia.

Kissinger will split off from Ford after the Russian meeting for a three-day visit to mainland China. The secretary said his trip is a normal part of the progressing relationship between the United States and Peking.

"I do not expect any dramatic announcements" while in Peking, Kissinger said, adding that he does feel there will be continuing progress toward improved relations with the Communist giant.

Snow widespread; Hurley, Buffalo hit hardest

By The Associated Press

A cold wind blowing across the Great Lakes turned moisture into clouds of snow Friday that buried parts of the shore areas under two or more feet of snow.

Hardest hit was Buffalo, N. Y., where schools closed, autos were dug out of drifts and snow plows cut paths for clogged morning commuter traffic.

The city had one foot of snow and up to 20 inches in outlying sections. The National Weather Service said another 6 inches could fall during the day.

"You're really never ready for a storm of this size," said a city streets department official.

Up to 4 inches of new snow was forecast in the northwestern part of Upper Michigan and Erie County in Pennsylvania. A foot of new snow was expected on the eastern shore of Lake Ontario.

The community of Hurley in extreme northern Wisconsin reported 30 inches of snow on the ground and plows were trying to keep U.S. 2 open.

There were dustings as rain turned to snow in northern Vermont and around Binghamton, N. Y., and as much as 3 inches stacked up as far south as the northwestern mountains of North Carolina where temperatures Thursday night dropped to as low as 10 degrees.

Four to 6 inches of snow extended along the North Carolina-Tennessee border. Resort areas in the area, hit hard by a mild winter last season, hoped the early, heavy snowfall was a sign of better ski conditions to come.

"I tell you I can't get my mouth shut I'm grinning so," said Grady Moretz, manager of the Appalachian Ski Mountain at Blowing Rock. "It's the right trend and it looks like we're getting off on the right foot."

Meanwhile, the Weather Service issued a special lake front warning for high waves and strong winds for the Chicago area. Westerly winds up to 40 miles an hour were expected to sweep the Michigan shore line from Muskegon to Michigan City, Ind., whipping up 8-to 12-foot waves.

Old time fears stirred up by white witch

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — The "White Witch of Salem" is stirring old-time fears of black magic on the North Shore of Massachusetts.

Unlike her 17th century sisters who were tried and hanged, Laurie Cabot, 41, is invoking her First Amendment right to free speech and quoting the words of John F. Kennedy.

A self-proclaimed witch who teaches a course on her craft as a practical science at Salem State College, she is scheduled to address an adult education class in nearby Georgetown next week.

Her coming appearance in Georgetown has met with resistance from some of the townspeople.

"Witchcraft violates our beliefs and is against the faith, and it is not anything that anyone should be playing around with," said Rev. Donald Bentley, interim pastor of Georgetown's First Baptist church.

Members of the church signed a petition reading, "We the undersigned are completely opposed to the public appearance of Laurie Cabot, the White Witch of Salem ... and to the public appearance or practice of any witch in the town of Georgetown."

"You'd think we were back in the 1600s," says Ms. Cabot — who uses the 20th century designation Ms. "If I'm denied my freedom of speech I'll take this thing to court."

Ms. Cabot — she says she's not related to the noted Boston Cabots — lives in Salem, where 20 people were killed for witchcraft in 1692. She insists that witchcraft — then and now — is a science, not a religion.

She says she is investigating the scientific phenomena of biofeedback, mind energy, extrasensory perception and clairvoyancy — not black magic.

"It seems like we're reliving sort of the witch trial thing. It's the same kind of psychic hysteria," Ms. Cabot said in an interview.

"Psychologically it must be a basic fear of self, because demons and spirits exist in your own brain.

"Jack Kennedy said it better than I did. He said, "Surely God's work must be our own,'" she said.

Exercises keep Hadl's arm alive

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — John Hadl, the 34-year-old quarterback the Green Bay Pakcers mortgaged their future on, has flatly denied all season that he has arm trouble.

"My arm is the best it's been in five years," he steadfastly maintains.

But Friday, following the Packers' workout, he admitted he needs to do 750 exercises a day to keep his right wing alive.

According to the current issue of Football Digest, Hadl was informed by a doctor last summer that his career was near an end, unless he began exercising his passing arm."

In an article written by Mal Florence, a highly respected Los Angeles writer, Hadl is quoted as saying, "It shocked the hell out of me. I thought he was kidding, but then I could tell he was serious. He said if I didn't do the exercises he prescribed my arm would freeze up, and I would be able to play only one or two more years.

"My arm was simply freezing up on me," he continued in reference to the '73 season. "Not to a degree that I couldn't throw, but it was an irritating thing. I first noticed it two years ago. It would kind of come and go.

"But last year when I went to bed, I couldn't sleep on my arm and it pained me to move it. The arm felt pretty good if I warmed up. But, if I didn't throw in practice for a half-hour, I'd have to warm up all over again.

"What happens is that adhesions build up in your shoulder joint just from throwing so much over the years. I hadn't done anything to compensate for that and didn't know what to do.

"Not until I had a long talk with the doctor did I understand some things. He described what was wrong and why and said certain exercises would smooth the joint out and give it the movement factor I didn't have.

"Baseball pitchers have the same problem. Sandy Koufax had a similar thing along with his sore elbow, and did the same exercises I'm doing. Well, I started the exercises and within two weeks I had my full range back without pain. I've had a little pain since, but as soon as I exercise the pain is gone. It's unreal. It's almost like magic.

"There are five exercises. I do each one 50 times — three times a day. That means I'm doing 750 exercises an entire day. It gets a little boring, but the results are miraculous."

Hadl said again Friday his arm problems are behind him. He said a quote attributed to him, confessing that he has an "old" arm is inaccurate.

"Exercises . . . have given me a brand new arm, basically," he said.

John Hadl

Also in this issue of Football Digest, guard Gale Gillingham with the aid of ghost writer Bob Billings, writes a feature on: "The Game I'll Never Forget." It is in reference to the Packers' 3-0 loss to Minnesota in 1971.

The reason Gillingham remembers it so well is because his son Wade lay near death that day with spinal meningitis and double pneumonia.

Wade recovered and Gillingham expresses deep appreciation for the help provided by Jo Devine, wife of the Packer coach. But he also offered an interesting insight into his relationship with his boss.

"And whenever I think of it (the Viking game) I'll think fondly of a certain lady by the name of Devine. It just so happens that she is the wife of the coach of the Green Bay Packers and it's certainly no secret that her husband, Dan Devine, is not one of my favorite people. But on that day Mrs. Devine did as much for me and my family as anyone could have done. She arranged for nurses and babysitters and arranged to have my mother flown back with us."

Later, Gillingham also writes, "I was a right guard then. It's necessary to explain that because under Dan Devine I've never known where I was going to be playing next, left guard, right guard, left defensive tackle, right defensive tackle. I've played them all. I've even felt like telling him he might as well play me at running back or quarterback. I was so used to moving around one more change in position wouldn't have mattered."

When queried about the article Friday after practice, Gillingham bluntly said, "no comment. No comment. No comment."

Lourdes '11' wins state title

BY MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer

OSHKOSH, Wis. (AP) — Oshkosh Lourdes, saved by a missed field goal with 10 seconds left, parlayed two second-quarter touchdowns to a 15-14 victory over Marshfield Columbus for the state independent high school football championship Friday.

Columbus, which had blown a 14-0 first-quarter lead, muffed a chance to win when Bob Dickman's 18-yard field goal try hit the left upright and bounced back.

Lourdes ran out the clock in two plays to preserve its first state title.

Dickman had connected on four of five field goal efforts and all 27 extra-point tries previously in the season.

Columbus scored on its first play of the game on a 51-yard touchdown pass-play from Dean Dix to Brian Fehranbach. The score was set up when Columbus' Chuck Hagman recovered a fumble by Lourdes' ball-carrying workhorse Mark Spanbauer.

Columbus marched 60 yards in six plays on its next series, scoring on an 11-yard run by Dix.

Steve Burr, Columbus' all-Central Wisconsin Catholic Conference back, raced 29 yards to spark the drive, which was aided by a Lourdes facemask penalty.

However, a 28-yard run by Bob Muza sparked Lourdes' first scoring drive, capped by a three-yard touchdown sneak by 150-pound quarterback Jim Runke.

A two-point conversion on a pass from Randy Swanson to Mike Muza made it 14-8.

Lourdes launched an 80-yard touchdown drive moments later, scoring 3:23 before halftime on an eight-yard run by Bob Muza.

Rick Zahalka kicked the conversion for what proved to be the decisive point.

Columbus drove to the Lourdes 16 in the third quarter, but was set back by a motion penalty and two running plays which lost 10 yards.

Lourdes threatened midway in the final period, but a Runke pass was intercepted by Dix in the Columbus end zone.

Columbus began its final drive at its own 28-yard line with 3:43 remaining. Facing third down and 28 yards to go from his own 13, Dix fired a desperation pass which Fehranbach caught at midfield and carried to the Lourdes 21.

The play gained 66 yards.

An 11-yard pass from Dix to Fehranbach set up first-and-goal from the four with 1:51 left.

But Burr was stopped twice for no gain, and Mark Meyers was stacked up inches short of the goal on third down, setting up Dickman's missed field goal.

Patriots rally to defeat Racine Park

BY DAN VANDERPAS
Post-Crescent staff writer

Appleton East fired in seven field goals in 11 tries and added 10 free throws in 13 attempts during the fourth quarter in rolling to a come-from-behind 62-59 triumph over Racine Park in a non-conference opener for both teams in the Patriots' gym Friday night.

Lindsay Klevesahl, a 6-2 senior forward, scored 10 points, while Phil Plamann, Bob Marx and Craig Beaudo all chipped in with four markers during the decisive final period.

"We beat a fine young team," Appleton East Coach Tom Gossens said after it was over. "Everyone on our team chipped in with especially good play at different times. Klevesahl and Beaudo were the standouts in the final minutes."

The Patriots' coach said his squad's half-court zone press helped a lot during the last eight minutes.

"I think our press caught their young team by surprise," he noted. "Later in the year, they'll be able to break it easily. But they didn't tonight."

The Patriots trailed, 43-38, going into the fourth session. But they rallied back to tie the score at 48-48 as Klevesahl pumped in a short jumper with 4:11 left to go. At the 3:43 mark, Plamann banked a pair of free throws to give AE a 50-48 edge.

A nifty pass from Beaudo, a scrappy 5-9 junior, to Marx with 3:20 left on the clock provided the Pats with another basket and a 52-48 advantage.

But the Panthers battled back to slice the lead to 58-57 with 37 seconds left as Clevis Franklin poured in a long jumper.

During the time remaining, both Paul Callaway and Plamann meshed two free throws for the victors to seal the verdict.

Mike Witherspoon, a 6-3 junior forward, gave the Patriots fits during the first period. The sharpshooter hit seven baskets as Racine Park jumped to a 20-14 lead going into the second quarter. He led all scorers with 14 buckets for 28 points.

Klevesahl set the pace for Appleton East with eight baskets and seven free throws for 23 points. Marx added 13 and Plamann contributed 12.

Other players in double figures were Park's Franklin and Dan Clausen with 11 apiece.

Appleton East connected for 22 field goals in 52 tries. In the third quarter, it was held to three goals in 13 attempts.

The Panthers collected 27 baskets in 55 tries, but the Patriots held a commanding 18-5 free throw edge.

Polar Bear '5' wins

HORTONVILLE — A mistake-producing 1-2-2 zone defense proved to be the story as Hortonville coach Russ Ullsperger made his debut a successful one. The Polar Bears rolled to a 54-35 non-conference basketball win over Manawa here Friday night.

The Wolves could muster only 12 field goals the entire night (Tom Langman was the top man with three of them) as Hortonville assumed control early, grabbing an 11-6 first period lead and a 20-11 advantage at the half.

Manawa's offense perked up a little in the second half — scoring a dozen points in both of the final two segments — but the Polar Bears did better, outscoring the visitors by four and six points, respectively.

Bill Moder and Mike Reader topped a quartet of double-figure scorers for Hortonville, notching 12 points apiece. Paul Schwarz and Tom Kruel added 10.

Brad Prather, with 12 points (eight of them on free throws) was the top point getter for Manawa. Langman added six, while three others contributed four points apiece.

Marion whips Amherst

AMHERST — Marion's Mustangs dominated second half play to defeat Amherst, 70-40, in the season opener for both squads.

Amherst played the Mustangs even in the first two quarters, and were close at the halfway point, 22-19. Then, Marion took advantage of several Falcon turnovers and controlled the play to post the final 30-point margin.

Amherst was close in the final statistics, shooting 34 per cent to Marion's 35 per cent, and just losing the rebounding battle, 33-32.

The Mustangs were led in scoring by Rusty Schieder with 32 points and Dan Passehl with 12. Tom Batoka led Amherst scorers with 12 points.

Menasha rolls past Berlin

BERLIN — Shooting an impressive 54 per cent from the field, the Menasha Bluejays rolled to a 78-55 victory over Berlin in a non-league basketball opener for both teams here Friday night.

Menasha connected for 30 field goals in 54 tries during the contest, while the Indians had 68 chances but converted only 23.

The pesky Bluejay defense forced Berlin into making 13 turnovers in the first half. Menasha rolled to a 17-10 lead after one quarter and took a comfortable 36-25 halftime advantage.

Menasha also held a 47-36 edge in rebounds. Kendall Rasmussen led the way both in rebounds and scoring. He collected nine baskets and three free throws for 21 points. Marshall Richards added 14.

Duane Page hauled down 15 rebounds for Berlin and scored 17 points. Bill Stoddard chipped in with 16, including six free throws.

The Bluejays were not as accurate with free throws as they were from the field. In all, they made 18 free shots and missed 13. The Indians banked nine of 16.

Coach Clem Massey got a look at many players during the inaugural and as many as 12 Bluejays dented the scoring column.

UW eyes 4th road win

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Northwestern's Wildcats, on the upswing with two straight Big Ten football triumphs, take on the powerful Wisconsin Badgers Saturday.

Wisconsin, 3-3 in the Big Ten and 5-4 for the season, will be seeking its fourth road victory of the season, a feat last performed in 1901 by a Badger team.

Northwestern is 2-4 in the Big Ten and 3-6 overall and Coach John Pont hopes quarterback Mitch Anderson will have one of his "up" games against Wisconsin.

"Mitch has been erratic this year," said Pont of the Rockford, Ill., quarterback who led the Big Ten in passing the last two seasons.

"He's been up one week and down the next, I just hope this is his up week." If Anderson is up, the Badgers could be in trouble because Northwestern's running game, led by Jim Pooler and Jim Trimble, has been getting stronger week by week.

Pooler, a fullback converted to wingback with the loss of Greg Boykin, is the fourth leading rusher in the Big Ten with a 103 average, a shade behind Wisconsin's Billy Marek, who has a 105.5 rushing average.

Marek presents the biggest problem for the Wildcats in addition to the passing of Gregg Bohlig.

"Marek lulls the defenses to sleep," said Pont. "The pursuit doesn't see a blur like it does when Archie Griffin runs. The outside men see Marek and think they have time to get him.

"He glides, he slides and he has the ability to hurdle without breaking stride. The outside people who are the ones who stop big gains think they can get to him but when they do, he has gained nine yards instead of four."

A victory over Northwestern would insure Wisconsin of a first division finish in the Big Ten. If Northwestern wins, the Wildcats would have an excellent chance of finishing in the first division.

Wisconsin defeated Northwestern 36-34 last year and another high-scoring game is possible.

Jack Mollenkopf has exploratory surgery

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Former Purdue University Coach Jack Mollenkopf was reported in good condition Friday, following exploratory surgery at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Doctors removed an abdominal tumor and the spleen Thursday, school officials said.

Mollenkopf, head football coach at Purdue for 14 years before retiring in 1969, entered Mayo's Nov. 3 for tests.

His 1966 team won the Rose Bowl, beating Southern California, 14-13.

Peck paces Omro past Reedsville '5'

REEDSVILLE — Reedsville made a try, but failed to keep the momentum of a second quarter rally alive as it fell to Omro, 80-64, in a non-conference basketball season opener.

Omro had jumped to a quick 15-0 lead and later stretched that to 19-2, but the Panthers came back to life in the second period, tying the score at 25-25 with 5:08 left in the half. The half ended with Omro leading, 41-32, as the Reedsville drive lost steam.

Omro continued to pull away in the final half, outscoring Reedsville 39-32.

Larry Peck of the Foxes was the game's high scorer, with 23 points. Kelly Daley was Reedsville's best with 14.

Kings edge Celtics by 1

BOSTON (AP) — Sharpshooting backcourt partners Nate Archibald and Jimmy Walker combined for 52 points but it was forward Larry McNeill's basket down the stretch that gave the Kansas City-Omaha Kings a 110-109 National Basketball Association victory over the Boston Celtics Friday night.

The Celtics, erasing a 15-point first-half deficit, finally pulled into a 101-101 tie with 5:28 left on a field goal by Paul Westphal, then moved in front 105-102 on baskets by Westphal and John Havlicek.

Archibald and Sam Lacey sank two free throws each to push the Kings into a 106-105 advantage, but Boston countered on a pair of free throws from both Jo Jo White and Havlicek. Then Walker hit for a basket and Larry McNeill added two more points, sending the Celtics down to their fourth one-point loss of the season.

Archibald hit for 29 points, while Walker contributed 23.

The Kings built a 45-30 lead in the second period, but the Celtics gradually cut the margin. Nate Williams came off the Kings' bench and hit for 10 points as Kansas City-Omaha built its big lead.

Havlicek led all scorers with 30 points. Don Nelson added 24 for Boston.

Walker leads Bulls to 102-95 victory

PHOENIX (AP) — Chet Walker poured in 27 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to pace the Chicago Bulls to a 102-95 National Basketball Association victory over the Phoenix Suns Friday night.

Charlie Scott led Phoenix scorers with 26 points, followed by Kieth Erickson with 23 and Dick Van Arsdale with 21.
